With A Touch of Class

Lindy,
H.O. Well you
I want me to write a lot so because I'm really glad we met friends. I hope you will stay in touch with me because I will need someone to go party with.
You know this year has really sucked shit.
Yaknow. Just remember you learn everyday something new. I hope you find someone new. That's what you the way you need them too. Love,
Wayne

Lindy,
You've been a lot of fun getting to know you in Spanish person and really good hope all your dreams come true. God bless
Adlene
Emilee

Lindy,
Well, at least you know that I'm not stuck up! I'm glad we became friends this summer. I hope we can keep in touch after high school. Good luck in whatever you do in life, and always stay the same. Love, Derrick C.

CLASSIC EXAMPLE...

Listening attentively to a speaker, students enjoy a session of Career Day. Career Day followed an assembly where Sandra Gonzales was awarded the Horatio Alger Scholarship.

Lindy,

Hey! I just read what Wayne wrote you. I don't think anyone could've said it better. We haven't been friends for very long, but I feel I've known you since we were young! You and I have been through some good times and bad times. Let's not forget the good times.

Happening With Some Class

Summer Ends, School Begins

As the hottest days of summer persisted, another school year started. Although summer vacation ended, the record-breaking heat and summer drought continued.

"I liked the heat, but I started to miss the rain," senior Hollie Carlson said.

Summer vacation allowed many students the chance to hang out with friends or travel abroad. Family trips along with school sponsored ones helped keep the summer interesting.

"I took a lot of family trips," junior Amy Brosch said. "We went camping, to the lake and to South Carolina to see relatives."

Even before classes began, students involved in fall activities hit the fields for practice. Mornings as well as evenings served as prime opportunities to avoid the heat.

"We practiced from 6 to 9:30 in the evening, so the heat didn't bother us much," sophomore Chris Johnson said. New experiences and old friends awaited students as the doors swung open on the first day.

"I guess I was looking forward to all the older girls," freshman Josh Lake said.

A CLASS ACT!!!

School did not consist of days full of research papers, algebraic equations and Newton's laws of motion. Aside from the academic point of view, came the most exciting and interesting part of high school life, Student Life!

Students enjoyed activities throughout the year, ranging from Friday morning pep rallies, to a variety of after hour get togethers.

The talent show brought students together to each spend a moment in the spotlight and show off their talents, while laughter filled the Williams Middle School auditorium as senior guys applied makeup, squeezed into dresses, topped it off with a $5 wig, and swayed onto the stage to compete in the annual Miss Año Nuevo contest.

To make weekends both enjoyable and affordable, and to pay for transportation, students often worked after school and on weekends.

SHE'S GOT THE BEAT... Keeping in rhythm with the band senior Holly Orton performs the dance to Wonga Boom, the short fight song. The varsity cheerleaders and sometimes the JV and freshman cheerleaders activated the early morning crowd by asking the band, georgettes and various sports teams to help keep the spirit alive. photo by Andy Armstrong

The Spirit Continues

Crowds Go Wild

Cheerleaders expressed it. Students exhibited it. The band played it. Teachers encouraged it, and somehow the football players sat through it. One tradition that lasted throughout the ages remained that of Eagle Spirit.

"School spirit is excellent," vocational teacher Carrie Ann Smith said. "All classes took every opportunity to support the school; even the freshmen took part."

During each pep rally a group of spirited senior girls took the floor to encourage the crowd. For the first time, these girls appeared to pull more pranks that had been previously male dominated.

"Standing out and making a good impression was important to the senior girls," senior Lisa Hall said.

Cheerleaders were not the only ones who entertained the crowd. The football players and student body played an important role. By getting dressed up, they became involved with the opportunities the themes offered.

"Beach bum will always bring a bad memory to me because I actually had to participate in the embarrassing event," senior Chad Sullivan said.

Sullivan had no choice when he, along with 10 other football players, played the role of male cheerleaders.

Whether dressing up, decorating the gym, cheering along, or just linking fingers during the school song, there were always traditions to follow.

In and Out to Lunch

New Rules Keep Underclassmen Inside

Whether spent in the commons, the park, or a local fast food restaurant, all classes cherished their lunch hour. It was not only a time to eat, but also a time to soak in some fresh air. Many spent the 50 minutes studying, running errands, or catching up on the latest gossip.

"My lunch hour keeps me pretty busy with work and errands," senior Chasity Sizemore said.

Upperclassmen were given the option to leave campus for their lunch break. Some opted for one of the numerous fast food restaurants, while others preferred to enjoy the weather at San Gabriel Park.

But for the freshmen and sophomores, there were not as many ways to spend the lunch period. Because of new policy, both classes were required to remain on campus.

This was a decision made by the School Board "to ensure the safety of the students and community," Principal Gary Crowell said.

While the decision did not please everyone, most students adapted well, realizing that it was a decision they could not change.

"I do think it is unfair that we have to stay on campus, but it is cool because you get to see all of your friends," sophomore Marcus Edwards said.

SPRAY 'N' WASH... With school and her job taking up daylight hours, senior Chasity Sizemore braves the chilly night to wash her car. Students met at the car wash to keep their parents off their backs about keeping a clean car.

After Hours

Students Go Beyond Books

Whether it was going clubbing on Sixth Street or taking a long nap, the time spent after the 3:46 bell rang received great appreciation by everyone.

"I love to play soccer, and that is mainly what I do with my spare time," sophomore Sean Conner said. "There really isn't time for anything else."

Saturdays and Sundays appeared to be the most popular of the seven days of the week. The weekend contained enough time for students to attack their long awaited activities.

"On weekends, I like to... never-mind, that probably isn't appropriate," junior Brittany Sizemore said. "I guess I like going shopping and going to the lake with my friends."

Being a large city with different activities to offer, Austin was visited often by students. Malls stood as the most popular sites in the city because they provided a variety of shops to choose from. For Friday and Saturday night dates, couples often enjoyed attending one of the numerous restaurants in Austin. From Chinese rice to an all American burger and from a laid-back atmosphere to a ritzy one, students could find a restaurant to satisfy their tastes.

Although students enjoyed visiting Austin, there remained some who preferred entertaining themselves here in town. During the school year, guys and girls attended school functions, such as sporting events, dances, and club-sponsored contests. Scattered throughout town were popular hang-out spots.

With the use of car hops, students did not have to leave their cars, so Sonic received a plethora of young men and women.

Being the only 24 hour restaurant in town, Whataburger attracted a number of teens. The park stood as a good meeting spot, as well as Appletree. Some students preferred to relax at home.

AGG, GIRLS!!! Trying to escape sophomore Heath Koaler screams for back up while sophomore Michelle Rogers takes a grip. Playful antics often took place in the halls between classes.

Assorted Attitudes

Styles Reveal Characters

Through the busy halls, people traveled in packs, voices occasionally standing out for all to hear. Different styles became evident as the sixties made a comeback.

Some students chose to throw out the tight jeans and wear the bell bottoms while others stuck with the general style.

"Everyone has a different personality and taste," freshman Chasity Prevo said. "Someone might think they dress in style while others may gag at them."

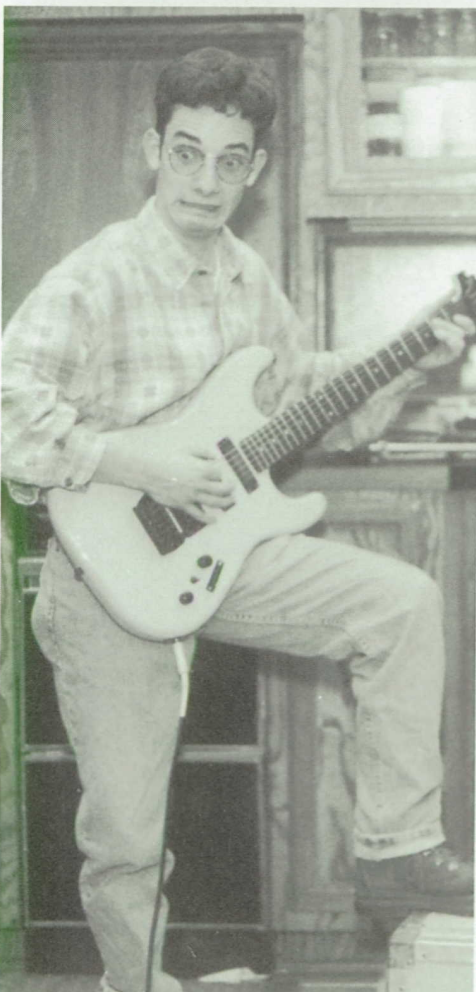

Style, an important factor for some,

for others this was not always the case. Individual style often said much about people.

"A lot can be said for the way a person acts," senior James Spears said. "I wonder how much of the joy or sorrow that we see is just an act."

School functions and activities served as an expression for a person's opinions.

In Crowning Glory

Excitement Reigns over Homecoming

Excitement grew as Homecoming drew near. Students looked for dates, and daily announcements consisted of new Homecoming nominees and their escorts.

"I think the game will be fun," sophomore Ryan McElroy said. "I'm looking forward to the dance."

Student Council members struggled to organize the activities planned for the Homecoming weekend. Dance decorations to be ordered, mums to be sold - Student Council Treasurer Amanda Polasek handled it all.

"I'm going nuts! No, I'm finally getting things together," Polasek said.

Cow bells on mums rang throughout the halls when the big day arrived, and the excitement from the pep rally lasted all afternoon.

Discussions contained who people voted for for queen, and predictions for the winner of the football game.

"I'll have to dig out my best polyester," senior Jason Wehling said. "It's nice to go to a football game without my band uniform - I'll feel naked."

Although the usual sights and sounds remained present, the original format of the Homecoming activities changed. Nominee introductions took place during pre-game, with only the court and queen announced during half-time.

"If they're going to exploit us," senior Jesse Kelly-Landes said, "they might as well do it in style."

Despite all of the changes, and Georgetown's 14-44 loss to Brownwood, Homecoming still turned out to be an event to remember. by Lori Yamka and Lauren Moran

Bringing Home the Bacon

Students Receive a Taste of Real World

From cash registers to hamburgers, students found jobs for various reasons. Extra pocket change and college savings became an inspiration.

"Working is okay, but it takes away a lot of your free time," sophomore Marcus Edwards said.

Edwards spent his after school hours bagging groceries at Kingsaver. Grocery stores offered a number of positions to high school students.

Senior Erica Surrency worked at Berry Creek Country Club, setting up for banquets.

"I like my job because it's a relaxed environment and my friends work with me," Surrency said. "But most of all I like not dealing with customers."

Students who maintained jobs often thought they had problems keeping their grades at a satisfactory level. With the work hours lasting late into the evening, study time was cut short and grades sometimes suffered. This forced students to crack down harder on the books. But the majority of the students agreed that the pay check was worth the extra struggle.

In the cooperative education program, offered to juniors and seniors only, workers attended school from 8:45 to 1:00- then off to work.

"I like my job because I love little kids," senior Allison Barnett said. "And I get out of school early."

Co-op was a good way to get experience and earn money all in one. Barnett was one of the several students who took advantage of this opportunity.

"I really like having a job," senior Jennifer Jolly, who worked at Westing house in Round Rock, said. "It keeps me from having to beg my parents for money every other day."

Getting Around Town

Transportation Tastes Vary

Cars, bikes, and buses represented the keys for transportation of students in the 90's. Students had many different options on how to travel to and from school.

Younger classmen rode with their older siblings. Having an older brother and sister at school provided many advantages for lower classmen.

"Well, I get a ride from my sister," freshman J.D. Crocker said. "It is a little better than riding the bus."

The school bus transported students who usually had no other choice than to ride the bus. It contained mostly freshmen and sophomores.

"I wish I did not have to ride the bus, because it is a long, boring ride," sophomore Audrey Harrill said.

Most of the upper classmen drove their vehicles to school. The pickup trucks and other various types filled the parking lot. Driving gave the students more responsibilities and more freedom.

"I like driving to school because this way it does not matter what time I get home," senior Jesse Kelly-Landes said.

No matter which method of transportation students used, everybody had to arrive at school before the bell rang at 8:45. Occasionally, car problems caused students to be late to school.

"It made me mad when I finally got to school, and they counted me absent for my car breaking down," senior Keith Litterest said.

Lasting Ties Friendships Flourish As Time Goes By

With the start of school in late August also came the start of new friendships. Some started from scratch while others picked up where they left off. But as the year moved on, friendships flourished and soon became a major part of everyone's lives.

"Without my friends, I don't know how I would last through the day," junior Brent Hamilton said. "Talking to my friends before and after school and between classes keeps me from dying of boredom."

Weekends became another issue. Fridays after school, girls with huge bags of paraphernalia loaded down their friends cars, and groups of people stood in the halls discussing where they hoped to go, what they planned to do, and where to meet.

"Friday is my favorite day of the week, no doubt," junior Tess Milford said. "Not just because it's the end of the week, but because I know I'm going to go out and have fun with my friends."

But in the blink of an eye, it was

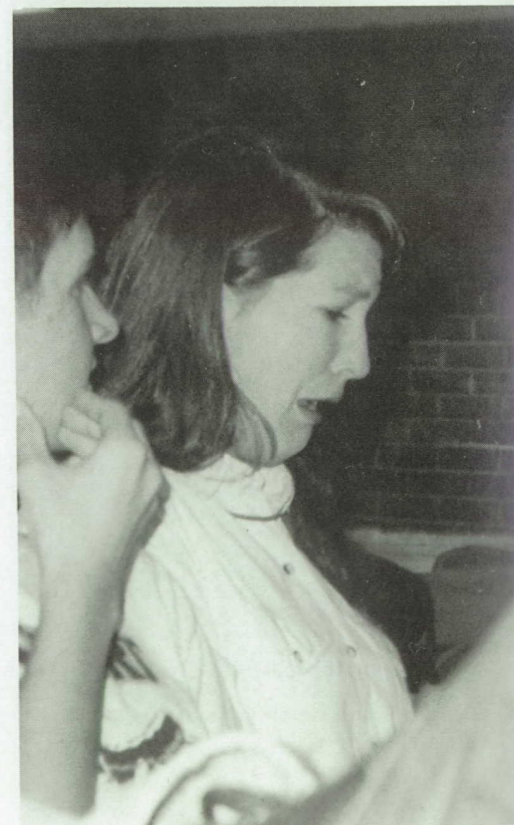

Monday again, and school was back in session. Mondays presented problems for a lot of teachers. Friends catching up on all the weekend gossip and excitement made most classes pretty noisy.

Birthdays and holidays served as a great excuse to show friends how much they meant.

"You don't realize how much your friends really care about you until you get a card that's so touching it makes you cry," junior Audrey Richter said.

All in all, friendships became a wonderful part of growing up. For a lot of people school work came second to their friends.

"Now that I'm a senior, I remember back to junior high and think about the friends I had then," senior Michelle Hancock said. "Between then and now, I've lost some, gained even more and have stayed close with a lot of them. The memories I've shared with these people will stay with me forever." by Kelley Schirmer

Dude Looks Like a Lady

Año Nuevo turns boys to girls

Invitations called for guys to don dresses, lipstick, and high heels. Hairy-legged, testosterone-filled teen guys pretended to be women for a night and competed for the title of Miss Año Nuevo 1994.

"This is a tradition that the Spanish club has kept for years, and we all look forward to it," Spanish club member Kristie Ratley said. "The money made goes to scholarships for seniors in the Spanish club."

The 17th annual pageant invited members of each club to select a junior or senior guy and create and shape him into a woman.

"I never in all my life thought I'd do this," senior Zach Baker said. "But it's my senior year, and I just don't care anymore."

The competition took place in the Williams Middle School auditorium on January 22.

After seeing the guys/girls perform in a group routine, an evening gown competition, and a talent competition, judges narrowed the contestants down to five finalists. These five finalists competed in the interview portion.

Intermission followed so the judges could deliberate. Meanwhile, senior Stacie Crocker and junior Sandy Smith entertained the audience by singing "Does He Love You?"

"Not making the finals was okay," senior Brandon Couch said. "I got to sit back and just laugh."

Fourth runner up, senior Richard Allen, "Miss Pickin' Daisies," represented the cheerleaders, while Jason Wehling, "Miss Peggy Sue Smith," earned Latin club third runner up. Representing the Spanish club, senior Chris Simek, "Fifi Spelling," received second runner up.

"It was really an honor just being nominated and making it to the finals," Simek said.

A Night of Gothic Romance

Class Favorites, Mr. and Miss GHS Chosen

The night was one of "Gothic Romance," with students and families of nominees waiting patiently to see the crowning of the new Mr. and Miss GHS, and the naming of the new class favorites.

"To watch the crowning of Mr. and Miss GHS was a new experience for me," freshman Roxanne Nemec said. "I'd never been to Coronation before."

Master, senior Brandon Couch, and Mistress, junior Annie Kersch, led the ceremony.

"I enjoyed being a part of the ceremony," senior Brandon Couch said. "It was a night with many surprises."

First, the naming of class favorites took place. Each class selected students of its grade to be awarded as their favorite. The freshmen chose Travis Caraway and Caroline Koy. The sophomores once again chose Adam Foster and Kristy Killen, while the junior class also re-elected Josh Hittman and Suzanne Koy. Damen Caraway and Christy Hodge were chosen for the senior class favorites.

"It was an honor to be nominated again," junior Josh Hittman said. "It's always interesting to see who wins each year."

After the announcement of class favorites, the nominees for Mr. and Miss GHS were announced.

The nominees for Miss GHS were: Lindsey Coulter, Amanda Hakala, Amber Pearce, and Deann Porfirio.

The nominees for Mr. GHS were: David Boram, Ben Knipscher, Shea Posey, and Todd Snead.

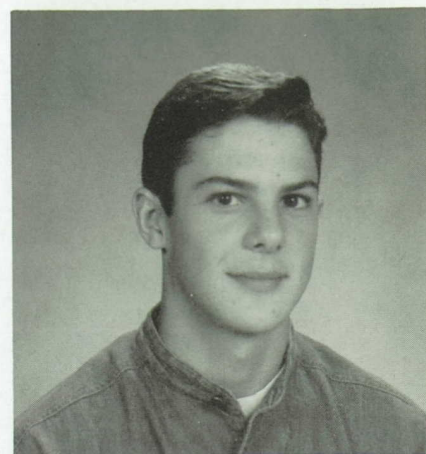

"I was shocked by being nominated for Mr. GHS," senior Todd Snead said. "The night was long but I had fun."

After senior Amanda Polasek sang "Black Velvet," Amanda Hakala and Ben Knipscher received the titles of Mr. and Miss GHS.

"Being chosen as Miss GHS was completely unexpected," senior Amanda Hakala said. "I was just thankful to be nominated."

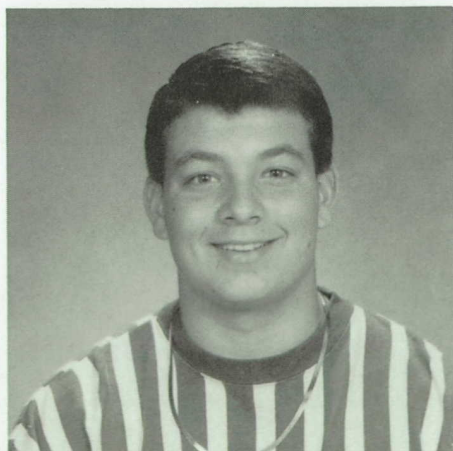

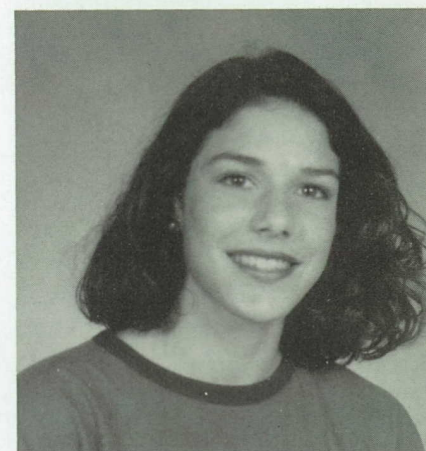

A reception and a dance sponsored by the Student Council followed the crowning, giving students a chance to relax and dance the night away.

"I thought the dance was the best part of the night," junior Brooke Brown said. "We got to dance and talk to our friends who took part in the ceremony." by Lori Yamka

A Variety of Talent

Annual Talent Show Attracts Students of All Interest

Participants in the 12th annual Talent show began performing even before the 7th period bell rang. The gymnasium was filled with sound and excitement as bands and performers took the stage for their last minute sound checks. The first come-first serve policy had many contestants getting out of class early for an assured chance to practice on stage.

The show, sponsored by the choir, showcased various talents of many students. From dancing to singing and music of all kinds, students of all grades and groups gathered to watch and participate.

"I think the Talent show is a good idea," junior Andy Clausen said. "It gives bands a chance to play since there aren't many chances for us in this town."

Opening the show, the girls' choir Blue Velvet sang its competition songs "Shout it" and "Someone Like You." Nine acts followed, including an impressive performance by senior Stacie Crocker singing "Young Love."

Intermission followed, giving the judges time to get up, stretch their legs and get a snack or two, while junior Sandy Smith and volunteers from the audience kept everyone laughing and entertained with humorous jokes.

"It was fun being an MC for a while," Smith said. "I was able to relax and laugh before my performance."

Jazz -N- Pizzaz opened the second portion of the show with two of its competition songs, "They Can't Take That Away" and "With You." Some of the following acts were freshmen Jennifer Gossett and John Marion singing "Sounds of Silence" and junior Kristine Klabonski with senior Christel Townsend singing "Secure Yourself." The Reservoir Dogs closed the show with "Jeremy" and a crowd pleasing version of "Wild Thing."

Crocker and Smith entertained the audience during the judges' deliberation with their performance of "Does He Love You" and two separate solos while sophomore Doug Murray accompanied each on the guitar. Next, the band One by One took the stage and brought the house down with some of their original songs.

The judges returned with their results, and the awards were handed out.

Fourth place was a tie between Caraway, Darby, and the band Puppy Sludge which included Chris Burns, Jeff Davis, Sean Hunter, and Brett McMinn.

Senior Amanda Polasek, who sang "Better Your Heart Than Mine," and Crocker shared third place in another tie.

Senior David Jurgens and Clausen received second place for their instrumental titled "Ambrosia."

A well deserved first place went to junior Clay Parker singing "Rope the Moon" and "The Fireman," and to Murray who accompanied him on the guitar.

"I was somewhat disappointed," Clausen said, "but I was still happy with the show, except for the 10 minute time limit, which is ridiculous for bands to set up and play."

Mardi Gras Extravaganza

Fundraisers Make Prom a Success

Giant clowns loomed over the entrance. Delicate flames danced from their candles and flickered off mirrors. Couples weaved their way through the maze of tables, dodging the flashbulbs of cameras. After months of planning prom had finally arrived.

"I think prom was a big improvement over past years," senior Ferde Garcia said.

The junior class, sponsored by the Business and Athletics departments, started their prom preparations three years in advance. Countless hours of work and dedication made prom a success.

"I was pleased with the results, but I wanted everyone else to be pleased," junior class president Megan McInerny said.

Fundraisers, from candy sales to raffling off concert tickets, helped the junior class officers collect nearly $15,000 for the prom budget.

"The hardest thing was raising the money because we had to get everyone together," McInerny said. "The officers couldn't do it all by themselves."

With the money earned, the officers bought everything from prom tickets to decorations. Using the theme Mardi Gras Extravaganza, the juniors decorated the Hyatt Regency with balloons, paintings, and Mardi Gras beads.

"I really liked the tapestries," senior Angela Rigsby said, "it added to the atmosphere."

After the awards for prom favorites and some more dance music, the magical night drew to a close. On the whole, most would say the evening was a success.

"I loved seeing all my friends dressed up and looking beautiful," senior Stacie Crocker said. by Ruth Langenegger

A Final Farewell Graduation Sends Seniors Off

The crowd filled the stands as the day had finally arrived. Friends and family flocked to Eagle Stadium to watch proudly as their senior received his/her diploma.

Seniors milled in the endzone, fanning themselves to relieve the heat. June 4, 1994 was a scorcher, and even the most delicate perspired. However, when asked if it was worth bearing the heat, graduates readily responded yes, with a jump and a grin a mile wide.

"It was so hot and humid I thought I would die," senior Heather Norden said. "I really felt sorry for the teachers in their black robes."

The ceremony began in its usual manner. Senior class president Amanda Bergstrom introduced the guest speakers for the evening. Also, current school board president Gene Lawhon paid a tribute to retired president Jeff Morrow who had passed away that week.

Salutatorian Tina Lee's speech was based on the book The Tao of Pooh. She told people to find what they were good at and continue doing it.

Valedictorian Jason Wehling entertained the crowd with his speech highlighting the humorous aspects of high school. Not following typical speech topics, Wehling surprised everyone.

"Jason is quite a clown," teacher Pattye Hagens said. "I couldn't wait to see what he'd do with his speech, and I was not dissappointed."

Following the speeches, senior choir members sang an original senior song, "Seperate Ways," by Stacie Crocker. Crocker wrote the song specially for the class.

Finally, it was time to receive that special piece of paper everyone had worked for. To some, the diploma had not been a guaranteed thing until that day.

"I didn't know if I would make it," senior Tom Scholle said. "I sure am glad I did though."

The only confusion of the night was at the end of the ceremony which students had not practiced. Friday's rehearsal ended early due to rain. The new graduates used their brains, and all went well.

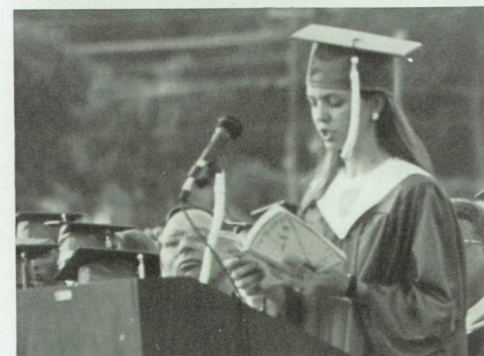

"We only practiced walking in and sitting down," senior Jessica Martin said. "I didn't know when we should walk off, so I just watched everyone else."

Graduates had to bid farewell quickly in order to find anyone at all in the massive crowd. Principal Gary Crowell announced that no one was to enter the field after commencement.

"I was angry that I couldn't get pictures of me with my friends," senior Roy Patterson said. "My mom had my camera, and I couldn't find her."

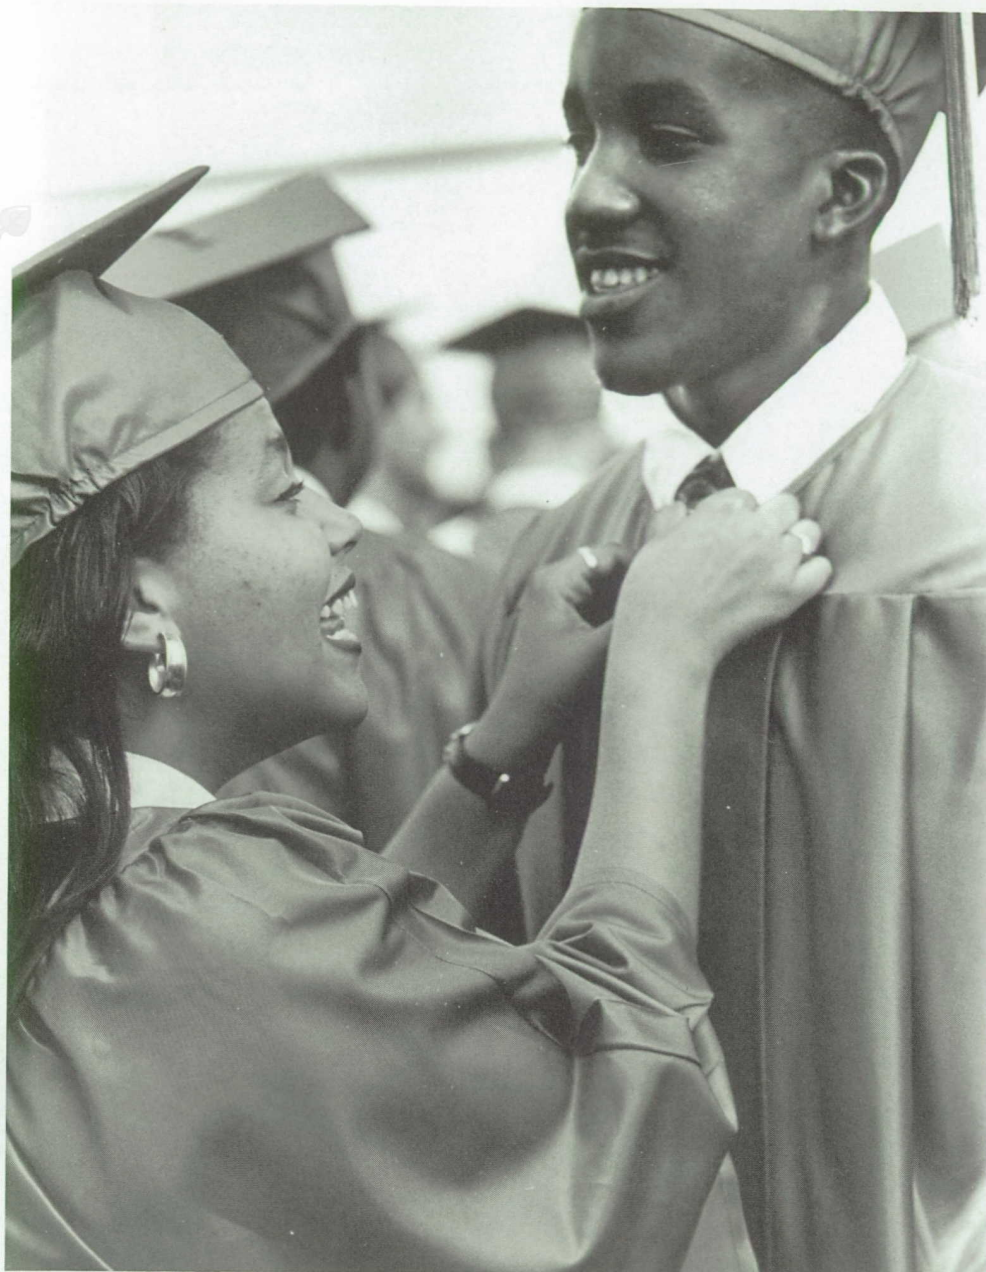

Friends and family managed to find each other eventually for a brief time. Soon after, many graduates headed off to Senior Safari, the chemical free party sponsored by parents.

The night everyone had been waiting for was quickly forgotten at the prospect of partying all night with friends. by Lauren Moran

DON'T YOU LOOK SPIFFY... Before graduation, senior Missy Thomas adjusts senior Dyron Taylor's tie. Several students had to finish dressing when they arrived at the stadium.

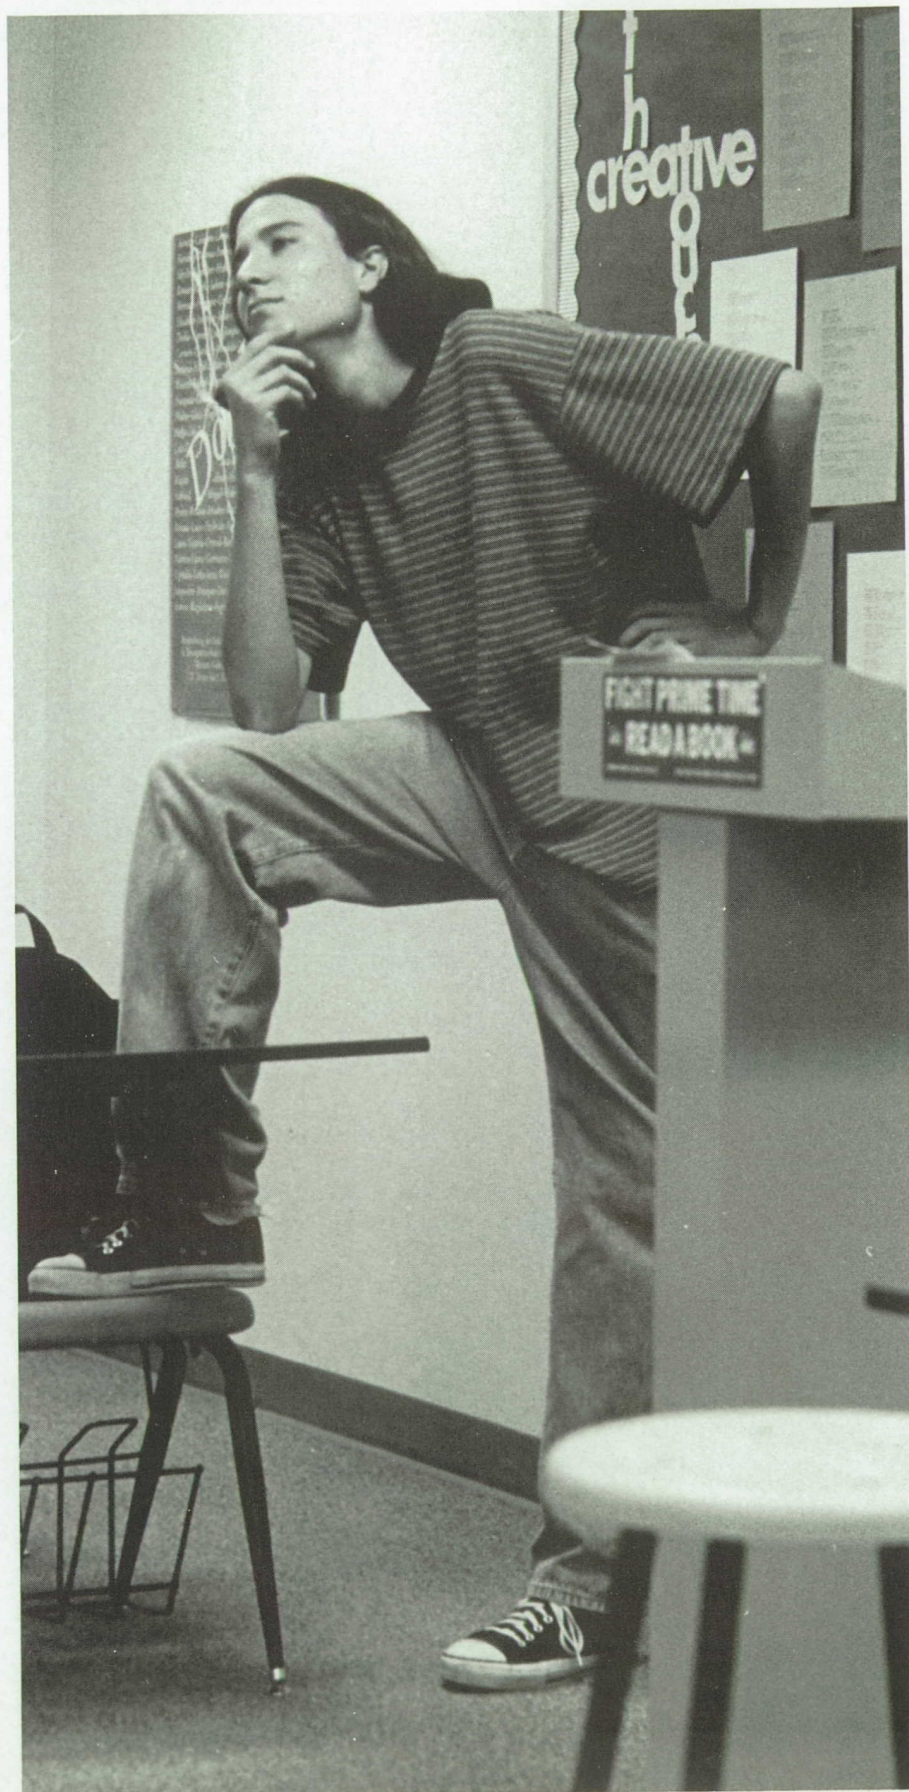

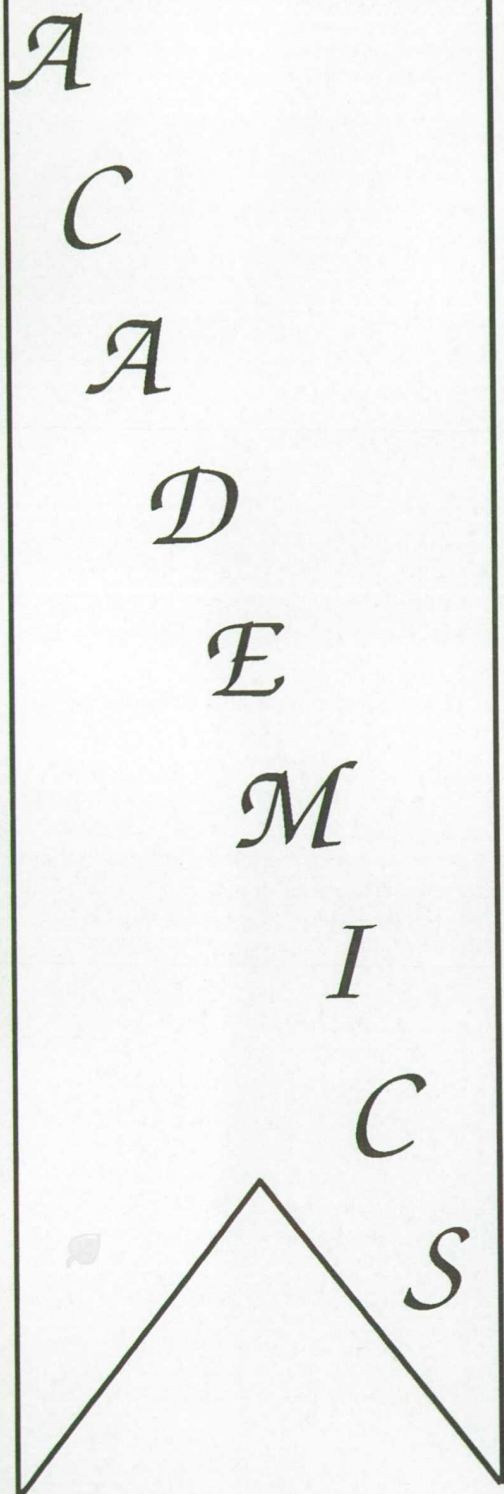

WATCH OUT LETTERMAN... Saying his top 20 list, valedictorian Jason Wehling emphasises the number one item. Wehling woke up the audience with his amusing speech.

'The top 20 things I learned in high school were:

- 1. If 5 senior boys are standing around giggling and saying, 'Hey little freshman, come here!' RUN AWAY fast!*
- 2. If you want an easy class, don't take AP Chemistry.*
- 3. The best view of the football field is from the band section.*
- 4. School carpet comes in really cool colors.*
- 5. Star Wars is still really, really, really, cool and Barney isn't!*
- 6. A can of Pork n' Beans has 3.5 grams of fat.*
- 7. I cannot play football.*
- 8. Marching is just as stressful as PE.*
- 9. If you really have to use the school bathrooms, DON'T! Wait until you get home.*
- 10. Elephants throw big graduation parties.*
- 11. I believe we all learned Mrs. Milford's Unicorn Song.*
- 12. You can get potatoes at the snack bar on Tuesdays and Thursdays.*
- 13. Waking up early to take an extra class is pretty silly if you think about it.*
- 14. College comes AFTER high school.*
- 15. Being 16 just means you're allowed to drive, not that you're any good at it.*
- 16. If you can play saxophone, you can run a country.*
- 17. If a car starts in Boston and heads west at 60 mph, and one starts in LA at the same time and speed and heads toward the first car, they will have a head on collision.*
- 18. Prom is too expensive.*
- 19. AL's Formal Wear is cheaper than Ascot, but each one is owned by a different guy named AL.*
- 20. If it had rained, this ceremony would have taken place in the gym.'* senior Jason Wehling

LEARNING THE CLASSICS

*I*n the beginning came academics. Later extracurricular activities such as band, sports, and choir added spice to a studious schedule. No pass no play meant academics regained top priority.

Shortened to 51 minutes to accomodate a 15 minute advisory period between first and second periods, academic classes encouraged students to stretch their minds.

Mathematicians measured the flagpole shadow to determine the height of the pole. Scientists conducted laboratory experiments. Historians studied the past while young writers wrote of their world and how they saw it.

Electives complemented the basic four, English, social studies, math and science.

Budding photographers captured images in their lenses while aspiring artists painted them on canvas. Young dramatists practiced for Hollywood as future chefs concocted culinary cuisines. by Lauren Moran and Kelley Schirmer

Soaring With the Eagles

Academic Excellence Praises Achievements

Academics received praise with the "Academic Excellence" reception and the performance of the literary aspects of the University Interscholastic League (UIL) competitions.

The "Academic Excellence" reception honored the top students in each class as well as special teachers and past graduates. The program started three years ago to honor students whose achievements fell outside sports and UIL activities such as music and other competitions.

"I think it's about time that students were given praise for good grades," sophomore Cheyenne Kelly said. "They always recognize sports and the band, but they don't really say anything about grades other than the honor roll, and no one really pays attention to that."

The "Academic Excellence" ceremony featured a guest speaker and a celebrity emcee. Toody Byrd, a distinguished former counselor and teacher, gave a motivational speech about dedication and respect, filling it with humorous anecdotes and quips.

"She is an insightful, intelligent woman," senior Jesse Kelly-Landes said. "I want to be like her when I grow up."

The guest emcee was Troy Kimmel, the former head meteorologist at KVUE and a teacher at the University of Texas.

Many of the attendants also excelled in other areas, including UIL competition. The literary contests, which included journalism, ready writing, and literary criticism, demanded much talent and dedication on the part of the contestants.

In literary criticism, senior Tina Lee placed first at district, second at regionals, and ended up with a sixth place finish at State.

"I was very pleased with Tina's performance," her coach, English teacher Theresa Cavender said.

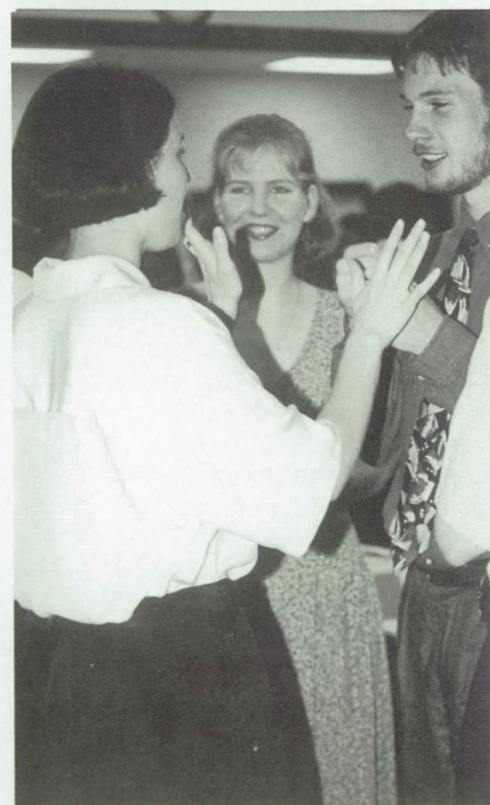

In ready writing, seniors James Spears and Jason Wehling advanced to Regionals after a first and second place win in district respectively. Spears then took first place at the Regional meet in San Antonio, where he finished with a sixth place win in the State meet at the University of Texas. Attending State made both Lee and Spears eligible for scholarships. by Jimmy Spears

PICTURE PERFECT... As the night begins, the GHS jazz band takes the stage to entertain the audience with its wonderful music. Parent volunteers from the Academic Booster Club spent almost eight hours decorating the tables and stage for the event.

PATTY-CAKE, PATTY-CAKE... Doing a hand jive for pre-banquet fun, seniors Jesse Kelly-Landes and James Spears slap hands while Lauren Moran looks on. Kelly-Landes and Spears enjoyed playing patty-cake at school functions.

THANK YOU, THANK YOU VERY MUCH... Receiving his certificate from principal Gary Crowell, senior Jason Leiker watches the passing of his award with humble respect. Honorees also received a scholarly tie-tack.

Behind the Scenes

Technical Theater Teaches Teamwork

Teamwork was a necessity for the designing, building, and painting of play sets. While some students painted, others hung pictures and even set up furniture. Without these people, there would have been no plays.

After the sets were sketched, technical theater students experimented with the flats by moving them around on stage. Finally, an agreeable set was found.

"Technical theater is more like a construction class than an acting class," sophomore Katie Peters said. "If you're not into acting, you'll like this class more."

After all the performances, the class struck, or tore down the set. The flats were then stored away and used for later performances. To those involved with the play, striking the set was a very emotional time.

"It seems like only a day ago we put everything up, and now we already have to take it down," junior Sabrina Teinert said.

When there were no sets to be built for school productions, students paired up and designed their own sets for plays read in class. This enabled students to learn to design individually.

"This is my favorite time because I use my artistic talent," senior Troy Neely said.

For those who wanted to be involved in theater, but did not have the courage to get up in front of an audience, they could still be part of the crew by joining technical theater.

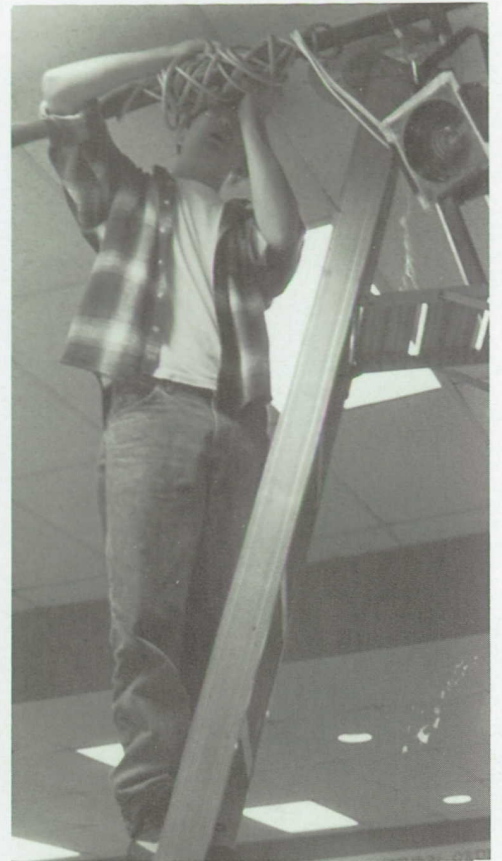

"It's better than math," junior Jeff Davis said. by Laura Miller and Jana Phillips

Of Mice and Mincing

Experiments and Labs Spark Interests

Although a required subject, science offered many options to maintain students' interests. A variety of difficulty levels ranged from physical science to human anatomy and physiology.

Freshmen began filling their two required science credits early with physical science. This class introduced concepts needed later for chemistry and physics. It also refreshed the memories of freshmen on terms forgotten since junior high.

"I like when we use the touch screen computer in physical science," freshman Clint Sharp said. "It's fun, and it kills time so we don't have to take notes."

Biology classes attempted to conquer the structure of DNA and theories of the evolution of man. They spent their year studying the five kingdoms while dissections provided an inside look.

"My favorite part of biology is genetics," sophomore Cory McCollough said. "I enjoy making Punnett squares."

Along with deciphering chemical formulas, chemistry students studied chemical composition.

Chemists learned about elements, molecules, and compounds. They later gained hands on experience through labs. A class filled with anyone from sophomores to seniors was bound to create havoc.

"I loved chemistry because I like setting 2000 degree fires," senior Andrew Bacelis said. "In one of my experiments, I built a flare that melted the portable fume hood and made so much toxic smoke we had to evacuate the room until it cleared out."

Any students wishing to challenge their minds further could take environmental science, physics, or anatomy and physiology. Each class, with its unique composition suitable to students' interests, offered skills and scientific background necessary for college.

"Environmental science prepares me for college because Colonel Nix gives us our projects and it's up to me to have them done on time," senior Heather Norden said. by Lauren Moran

Into the Looking Glass

A Unique Perspective to Learning

School days, often repetitive, consisted predominantly of lectures or busy work. Humanities, however, taught by Louis Devanney, explored a whole new realm of introspective understanding.

Unlike traditional classes, humanities encouraged each student to draw on only one aspect of each lesson which was most beneficial to his or her needs as an individual. Students learned skills for life, not just school. The challenge humanities offered extended equally to all students, regardless of their academic status as an honors or remedial student.

"I liked being in a class where I don't have to compete with everyone - I just challenge myself," senior Nancy Mohn said.

This was made possible by a teaching philosophy which encouraged uniqueness and stressed the power of individual thought as opposed to normal written tests and written work. The teaching technique allowed many students who rejected the conventional method of teaching to become selective in the information they acknowledged as truth.

This method ultimately left the door open for them to explore the answers to enigmatic or perplexing concepts which scientists and philosophers have sought answers to throughout history.

"It's been very interesting to hear how other people interpret the philosophies of ancient theologians," senior Kevin Hausenfluke said.

The class itself covered a variety of topics, ranging from Greek philosophy and in-depth analysis of human nature to music, film, and art. This vast array of subjects helped each student find something of interest to them.

In the philosophy unit, concepts of teachers such as Plato and Socrates were examined. Studies such as this enabled the students to evaluate varying historical viewpoints and to apply them accordingly to modern day situations.

"Even seemingly outdated Greek philosophy is useful in helping one understand such abstract topics as 'happiness,'" said senior Andrew Bacelis.

The film unit was a highlight of the course as well. Students were instructed to observe each film through the eyes of the director and attempted to determine the message he or she was trying to convey. This perception enabled the students to critique the overall cinematography in a way that differed from the traditional plot analysis.

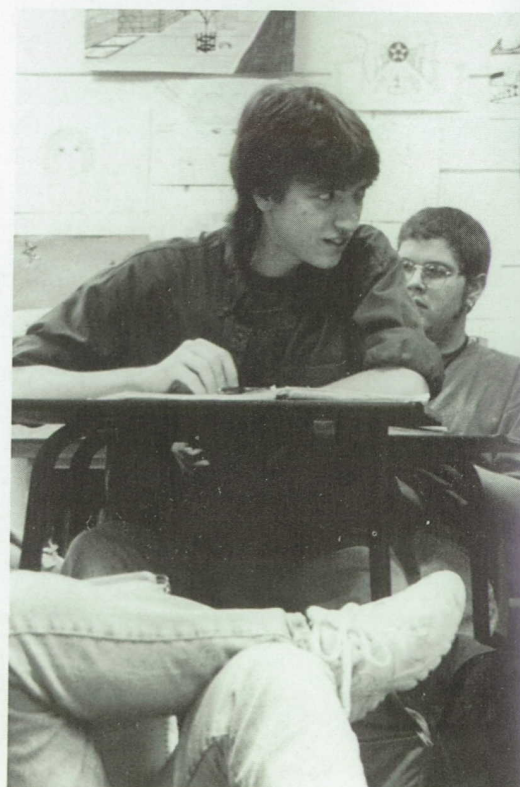

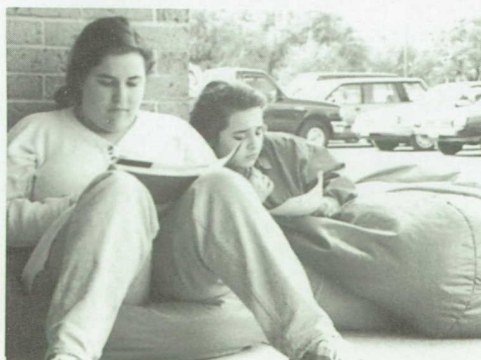

"I liked having the chance to examine the directing and the script rather than just watching the movie for entertainment," senior Patrick Hurley said.

Another focus of the class was art. The students viewed a slide show which introduced a new way of looking at the various works of artists throughout the ages. This, in addition to the variety of other techniques used to teach the class, gave the class an overall aura of imagination and creativity.

Recurring Repartee

History Makes Encore Presentation

If history is repeated, why must students learn it when they can participate in it later? Students often felt this way as it came time to learn the discovery of America yet another time.

Upon entering high school, freshmen had to choose between world history or geography. Only the most adventurous took both.

"Taking both classes isn't hard if you have the same teacher," freshman Tiffany Holmstrom said. "History is a lot easier though."

Sophomores received time off for good behavior, but for juniors it was back to the books. Focusing on United States history, students studied causes for the major happenings of the past.

"I think it is stupid to take the first half of US History in eighth grade and wait until your junior year for the second half," junior Andy Armstrong said. "You can forget too much material."

For seniors, remaining focused on their last required social studies credits was difficult. For some, the only consolation for still having to study was government and economics contained different information from any other history classes.

"Mr. Thomas makes economics interesting and fun," senior James Janing said. "Macroeconomics is a-okay!"

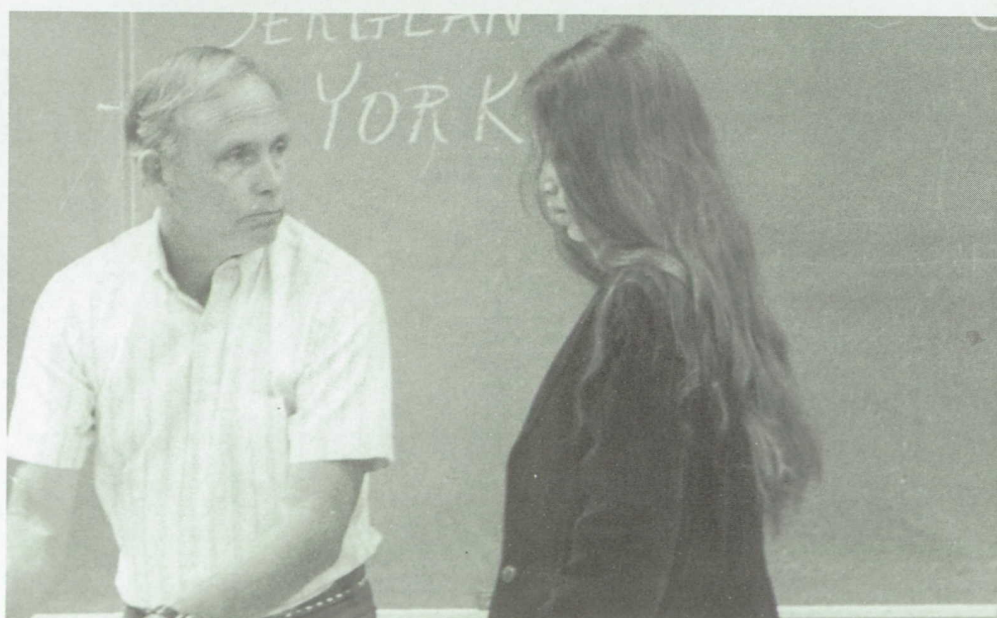

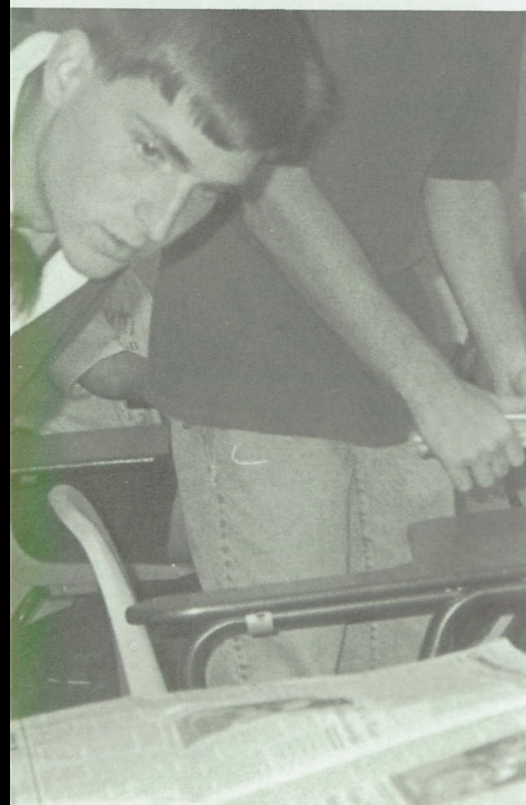

Although history will eventually repeat itself, students continued taking history as a required credit, waiting for the repetition to occur. by Lauren Moran and Kelley Schirmer

The Sounds of School

Screams, Scribbles, and Slams Score Day

Eight-thirty AM...school was about to begin. A swarm of students prattled, still half asleep. The bell rang, and chaos began.

Freshmen bolted to class in fear of being tardy, while sophomores chattered as they walked with friends. Juniors stopped to gossip with everyone in the halls, while seniors wandered aimlessly, preoccupied with thoughts and ideas having nothing to do with school. Soon first period began, and the halls were clear, with a few stray exceptions.

In photojournalism most students were still asleep. Despite the sleepy complaints, the students still talked. A monotonous murmur was heard every day while pictures and film were developed, and stories were written.

Later the bell rang, and once again the halls filled with students. The busy crowds filed into their advisory classes. Carla Jackson's class lounged freely along the stage in the little theatre and chatted about their schedules for the day.

During the next period, second period, Karol Chapman taught honors English to sophomores. After she gave the class an assignment, the small talk stifled, and the only sounds heard were pens scratching busily on the assignments. Occasionally a brief sigh was heard, but most were silent...until the bell rang for third period.

The noise in Spanish class was overwhelming. The radio blared, and voices filled the room. Soon teacher Joe Ramirez invited the students to join him singing a Spanish song.

"This class is cool because we talk and sing for a grade," sophomore Jeff Busch said.

All too soon the bell rang and pupils migrated to lunch. Silence was never heard during lunch. All of the students discussed the events that had occurred during the day. While some gathered in large groups, others separated into couples. Nevertheless, lunch ended, and fifth period began.

"What did the little seed say when he grew up? Gee...OM-A-Tree!" Sarah O' Brian, honors geometry teacher joked. All that was heard during this period was the confusing speech given by the teacher. Looks of utter despair were exchanged by the students, and the bell never rang soon enough.

During sixth period, JV tennis, grunts of frustration and cries of victory were heard. Students worked out tension and used up energy that had built up during the day.

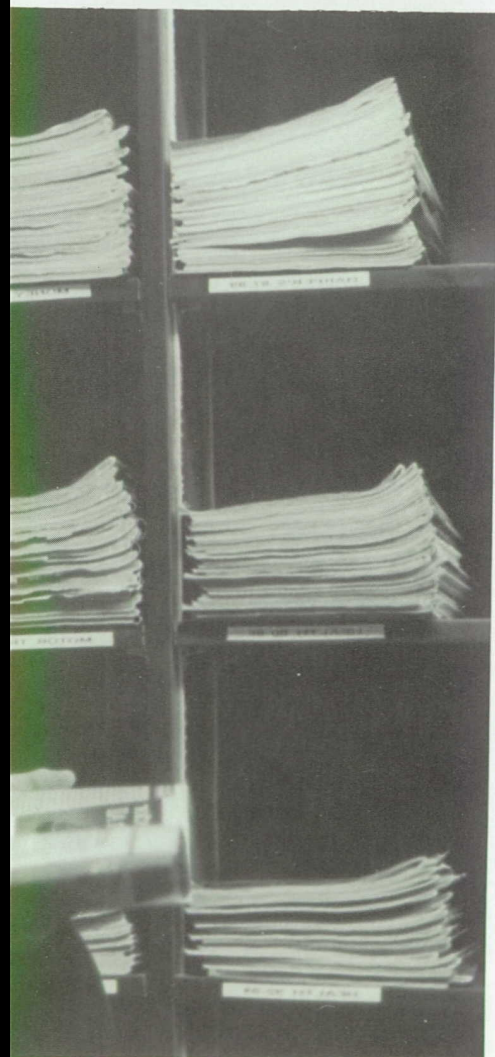

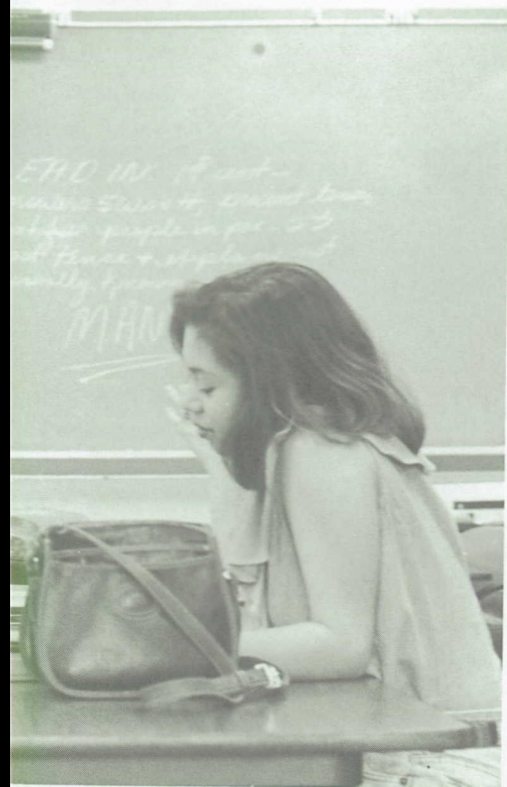

"I'm glad that I have tennis sixth period," sophomore Natalie Benevides said. "It gives me a chance to work out my stress from the day. I also enjoy the workout."

Class was dismissed after a few encouraging words were spoken by tennis coach Kerry Minzenmayor.

Finally seventh period rolled around, and biology began. Most students glanced at their watches often, anxious for school to end. Teacher Jeanie Jacob lectured about cells and heredity, while a curious class asked many consecutive questions about the broad field of Biology.

When school finally ended, once again mass confusion was the state of the halls. Students rushed to their cars as quickly as possible in order to meet all of their friends at a local hang out.

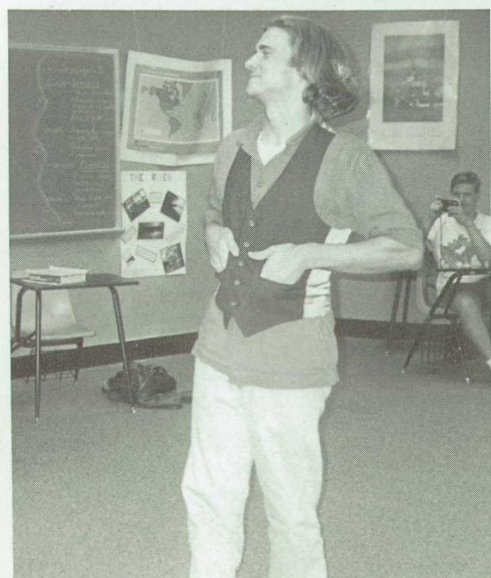

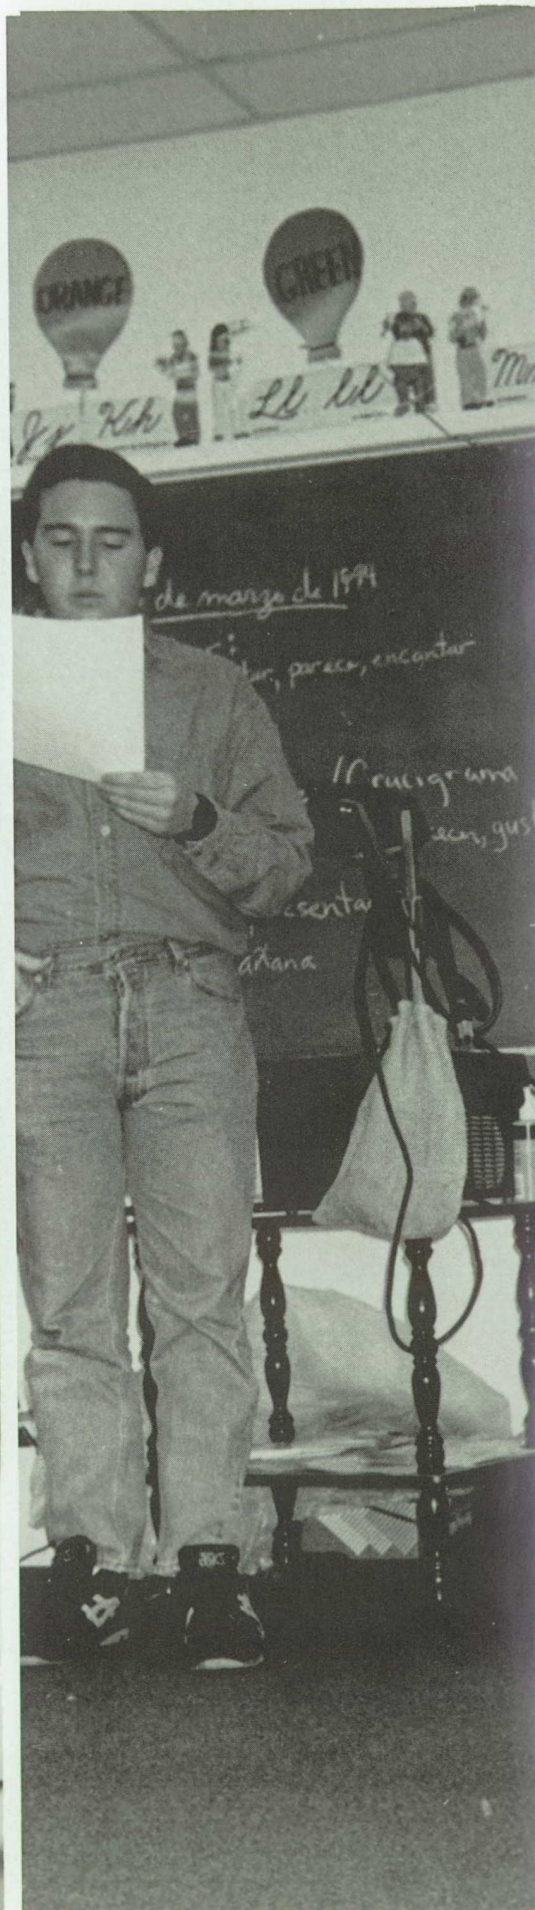

Eventually, all went home in order to rest themselves for the next day, and the next...and every day after, each day looking forward to the next vacation or break from the continuous cycle called school. by Bernadette Hinojosa

Say Anything

Foreign Languages Are Popular Electives

Foreign languages became some of the most popular electives for students of all ages. They gave diverse reasons for taking a foreign language.

"I need to know Spanish before any other language, especially since I visit Mexico more than any other country," junior Summer Rydel said.

Some students chose to take a foreign language in preparation for their future endeavors.

"I am taking Latin because it is a good preparation course to take for SAT's and college," sophomore Carlene Ussing said.

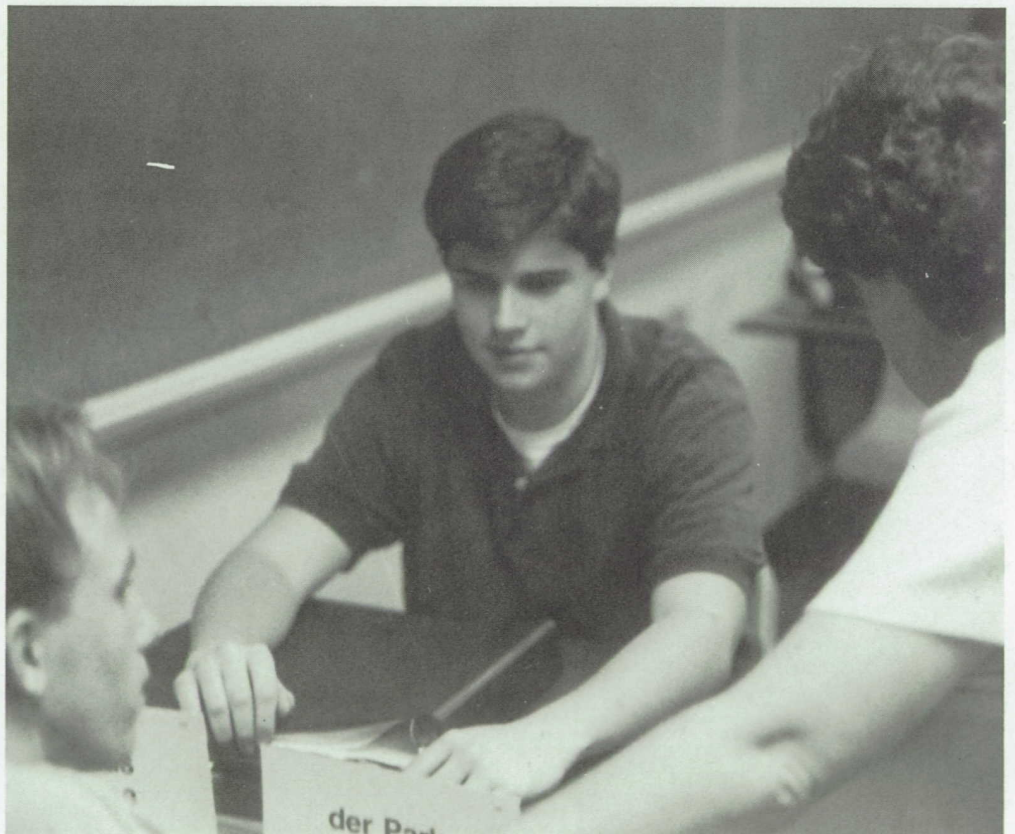

For some students, learning a language was not such a difficult task to accomplish when they spoke two languages already.

"French is easy if you know Spanish, but if you don't, then you have to repeat what the teacher says to understand," freshman Rene Barragan said.

Other students chose a foreign language because they found it to be filled with opportunities to participate in fun filled activities.

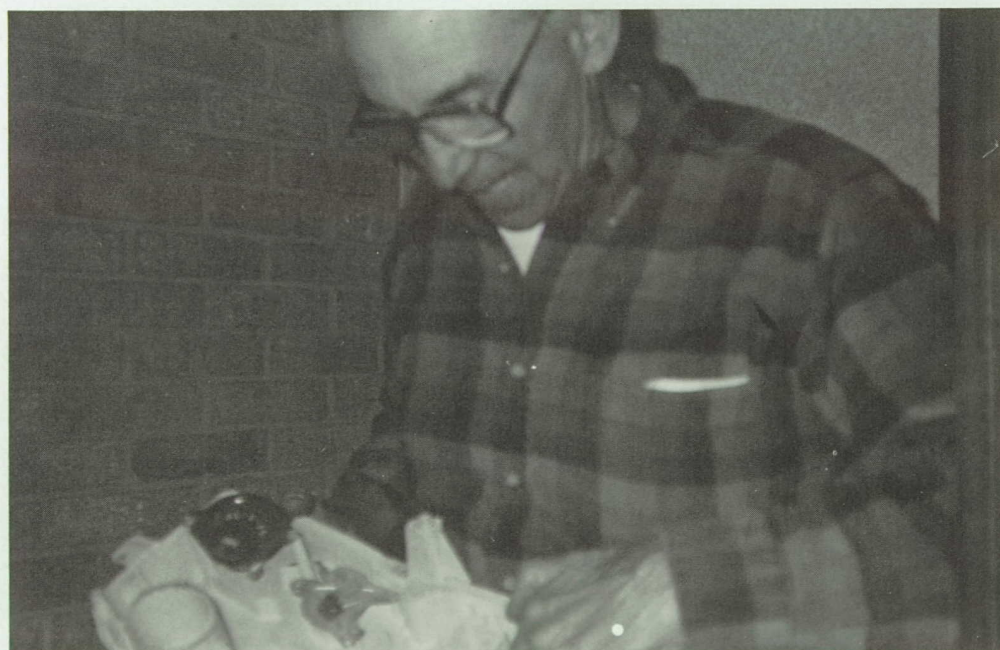

German I and II students interacted with foreign exchange students during the spring. Students from Norden, Germany visited for three weeks, attended school, and explored the sites of Central Texas.

"I took German because it is interesting, we do fun activities, and it is the easiest language to learn," senior Stacey Sawyer said. by Bernadette Hinojosa and Guadalupe Riojas

Vocational Fun

Classes Entertain as well as Educate

Vocational academic courses gave students an opportunity to learn special trades for constructive future use. Students enjoyed these courses because they entertained as well as educated.

"I really enjoy learning about nutrition in Mrs. Smith's class," junior Sativa Fustin said. "It is also fun learning about and actually cooking different foods."

Laura Sue Smith instructed Food and Nutrition, as well as Culinary Careers, in the vocational wing. These cooking classes gave students a chance to learn and experience the art of cooking and nutrition.

"Culinary Careers is a good course for someone to take if they enjoy preparing food or if they want to have a profession later in life having to do with cooking," senior Jesse Torres said.

At the other end of the vocational building, students got their hands very dirty. Auto Mechanics, a course specializing in the mechanical work of automobiles, helped students learn more about and how to work on vehicles.

"I love being in Auto Mechanics because now I can actually tell what is wrong with my car, and I can fix it," senior Frank Miranda said.

Auto Mechanics and cooking classes represented only two of the numerous vocational classes offered. Students especially enjoyed the hands-on experience received while doing things they enjoyed. by Nicole Paggi and Molly McWorter

English Ain't Just Grammar

Creativity Liven's Up Classroom

English classes allowed students to expand on their previous knowledge by exploring their creative thinking. In addition to comma rules and proper punctuation, English teachers stimulated students with a variety of methods.

In early spring, Dr. Cybal Hampton, assistant to the President of Southwestern, visited Judy Hindelang's English III classes.

Dr. Hampton spoke about her experiences during her three years of high school in Little Rock, Arkansas, as one of the five original integrated students in 1957. Her message of individuality touched and inspired the students who listened with interest.

In addition to guest speakers, English students also experienced hands on creative activities such as blowing ink onto paper making pictures that represented the mood of the music to which they listened.

"At first it looked like a black blob with red spots, but flipped over it was a black heart with blood stains," senior Blake Hilstrom said. "The music, my mood, and the picture inspired the poem I had to write about my blown ink."

All English classes did activities other than merely reading and writing. Many classes read and then expanded their learning with corresponding projects.

After reading about Helen Keller in Kimberly Gammil's English I class, freshmen experienced what it was like to be visually impaired. Walking blind and smelling things they couldn't see helped many freshmen discover how difficult it was.

"I was surprised at how hard it was to function," freshman Hillary Staton said. "Projects make reading more fun."

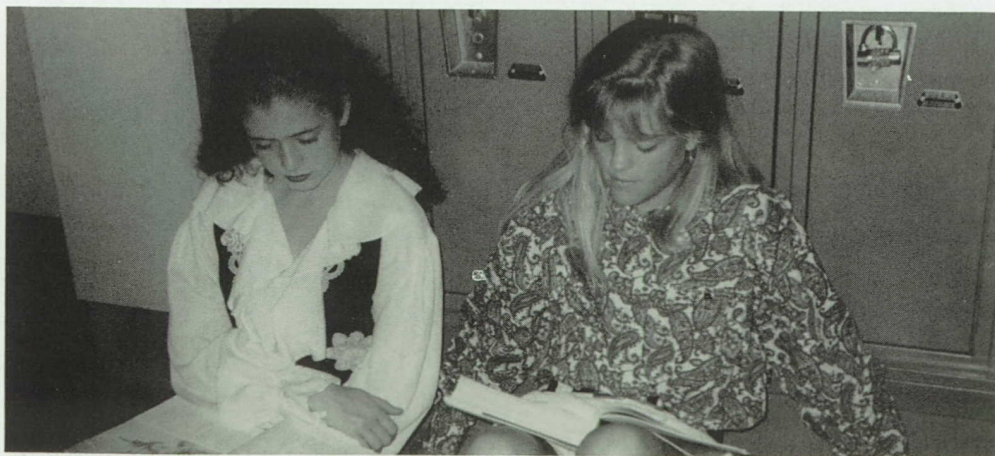

For juniors and seniors, teachers emphasized feelings as well as imagery in their poetry. "Found poems" changed plagerism of novels into original poems. Seniors also filled srabbooks with memories of the year.

"It is sort of a pain," senior Justin Edgar said, "but maybe I will look back one day and be glad I did it."

A new development within the school district was portfolios. Kept by English teachers, these folders contained chosen works from all classes to show the progress of the students. They will be passed on to future English teachers.

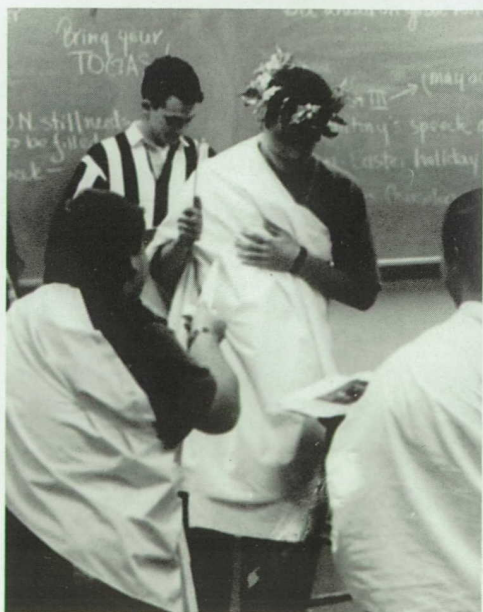

"I think the portfolios are fun to keep," sophomore Keri Billen said. "I wish we had started them when I was in kindergarten." by Lauren Moran, Kelley Schirmer, Lori Yamka, Andy Armstrong, and Matt Bray

EAGLE Class Enriches Minds

Adding an extra half an hour to their school day, students taking the zero-hour elective known as EAGLE class dedicated mornings to enriching their minds. Juniors and seniors willing to make this sacrifice earned honors credit while covering subjects not taught during the regular school day.

"It is creative and stimulating in a way that enhances my educational career," senior James Spears said.

EAGLE class participants earned mathematics credit first semester in Survey of Mathematics. First six weeks, each group taught a math lesson dealing with logic. Presentations required specific curriculum to be taught in an interesting way for the class.

The second six weeks allowed students to choose their own projects to enter in a science contest. Final projects ranged from science fiction stories to a short sci-fi film. Finishing out the semester, students wrote research papers incorporating graphics using the Linkway program in the computer lab.

"The Linkway program introduced us to the world of computers," senior Rob Trostle said. "Now I am a computer hacker."

During the second semester, students earned a social studies credit, as the class was officially named Advanced Social Science Problems. To meet the required curriculum, groups chose one national and one international affair in current events. Presentations varied from a blues medley about a Russian czar to an enciteful game show on political correctness.

Projects for the remainder of the year proved to be just as creative and fun. To learn about the world of advertising, groups had to create ad campaigns to present, hoping to coerce teacher Pattye Hagens into sponsoring their cola.

"I had fun doing the advertising project," senior Nancy Mohn said. "Filming our commercial was cool as Ice Cool Cola. That's our soda."

To end the year, students worked on an independent study project. This allowed students to do anything they chose. One group recorded an album and made a video. Another did a magic card game while Mohn taught the class how to tie-dye t-shirts.

"It's learning at its best," junior Gillian Brody said. "It's a totally crazy class, definitely worth taking." by Lauren Moran

KEEPING IN TOUCH

Upon entering the building at the start of a new school year, I was able to distinguish the different classes. Freshmen girls stood out with their impeccable dressing habits. Not a hair out of place or a smudge of their carefully applied makeup to mar their appearance. Freshmen boys tended to act like this was junior high, and didn't catch on right away that this was high school.

Sophomore girls still dressed with careful consideration, while the guys realized that they weren't freshmen anymore and thought they were now hot stuff.

Junior girls wore whatever they wanted, and didn't care what people thought, (most of them). Makeup and hair was a hassle to mess with, so few did. Junior guys believed they almost ruled the school now that they were upperclassmen.

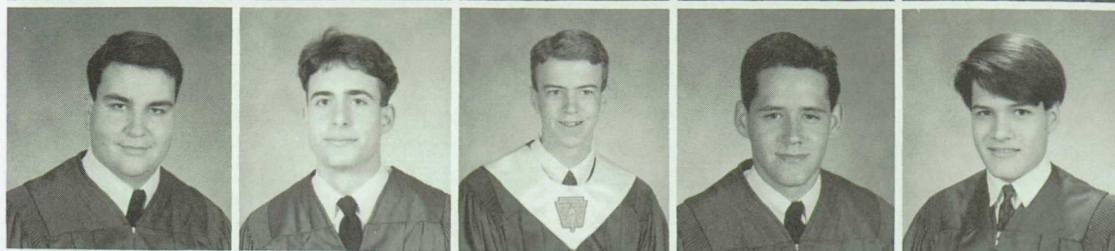

Seniors, well they were seniors! They'd almost finished and many were stressed out now that the wide world of college loomed before them. by Kelley Schirmer

Head of the Class

Decisions, decisions, and more decisions faced the senior officers. Between fundraisers, weekly meetings, and special activities the officers kept very busy.

"It takes a lot of work and responsibility, but it is a lot of fun!" senior president Amanda Bergstrom said.

The senior officers spent most of their time dealing with graduation preparations. The decorations, invitations, and the ceremony plans described just a few of the decisions the officers made for graduation.

Another big decision involved the planning of the senior trip. The officers asked students where they would like to go on their trip, and made a decision based on the responses they recieved.

This year the officers decided to go to New Orlean's for their trip.

All of the officers activities and fundraisers went to help benefit the senior class of 1994.

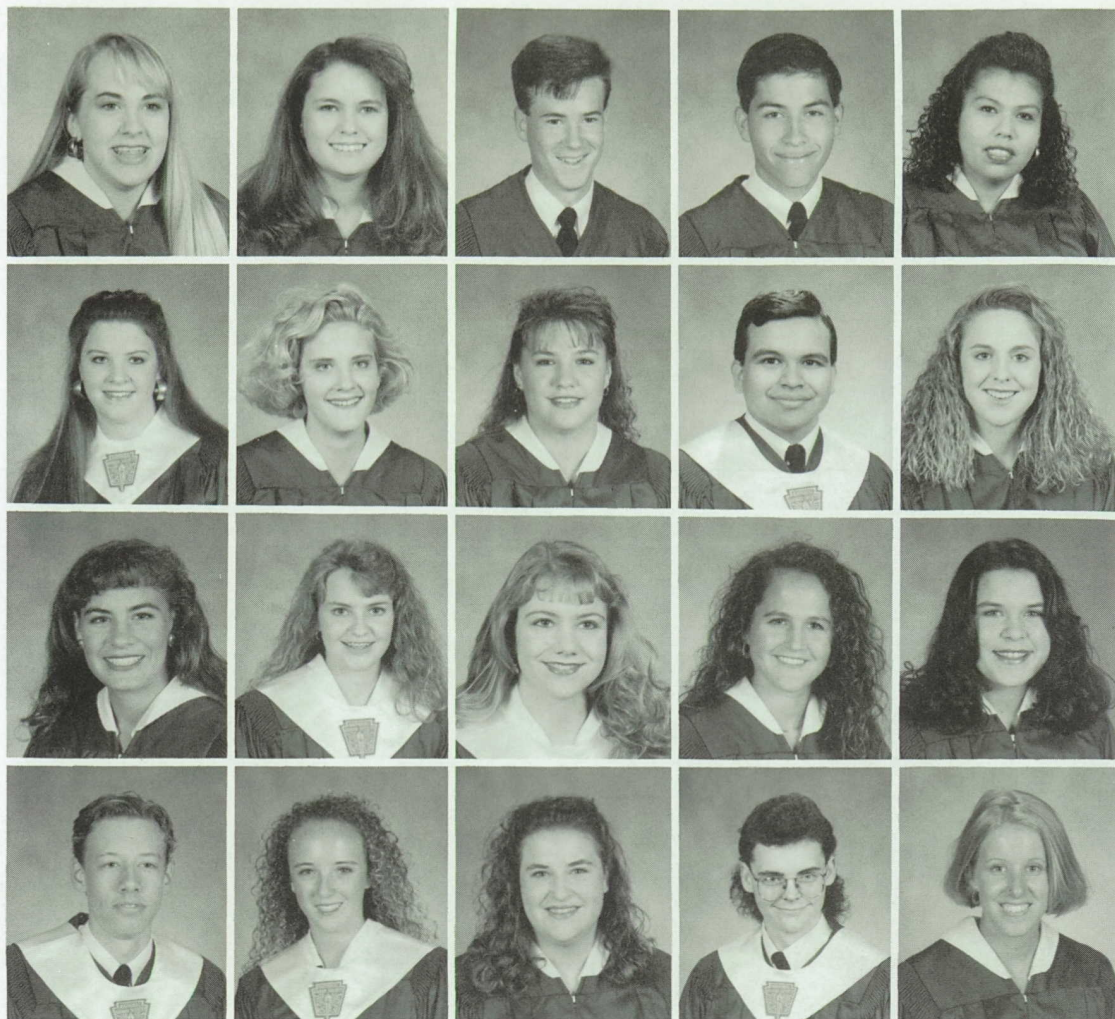

"We just want everyone to have a great senior year," Bergstrom said. by Krissy Olson.

Lunch in the Park

Many seniors experienced this situation. Where to go for lunch?

"I don't know, but I wish it would finally get here," senior Nikki Delleney said.

Other students shared the same views as this student as they waited for the fifth period bell to ring. For many seniors lunch bell meant one thing.

It was time to go eat lunch in the park.

"It's so pretty out here usually," senior Tracy Berich said. "I just like coming out here and eating instead of being inside some stuffy restaurant."

Rain or shine students still went out to the park.

When the weather was wet, a good little mud pit formed behind the football field for a little off roading.

Some students used this mud pit to release some frustrations that occurred during morning classes.

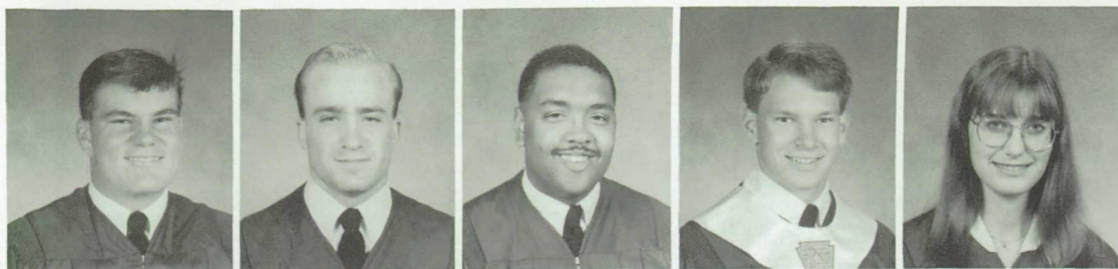

Still others used the hour in the park to catch up on a few assignments or catch up on a few missed hours of sleep.

"I like doing my homework in the park," senior Chris Simek said. "It seems like I think a little clearer out here among mother nature's beauty." by Justin Edgar

THE PARTY'S OVER... Standing by the SFASU sign, seniors Ryan Rutledge, Bruce Miller, and Mike Sobey show interest in this college. Many seniors took trips to visit colleges they were thinking of attending. photo by Shea Posey

College Bound

College meant different things to seniors. To many seniors freedom was the word that came to mind, while to others it was the shrilling fear of the real world coming upon them.

"It is kind of scary if you think about it," senior Ryan Rutledge said.

Several factors influenced where one might go to school. These ranged from factors such as getting accepted or having the money to pay for it to things such as location.

"I would just like to go to a place where I can have a good time and get the background I need for a good job while doing so," senior Jerrod Wittman said.

Other students, requirements for college were much easier.

"I just want to get out of Georgetown," senior Bruce Miller said.

This feeling is common among many seniors.

The best way to decide on a college was to visit the schools campus. Many people found it a great help and lots of fun, especially when taken with friends. Though gas money and meal money was tight, everybody always seemed to have enough when it was over.

"It was great male bonding, definitely a memorable event," Miller said after such a trip with friends. by Shea Posey

Rollerwoman

As the sun went down over the horizon, an intense game of roller hockey came to an end. Six of seven guys and one girl gathered on Saturday or Sunday evening to play.

And who was the only girl brave enough to play with such men? Well, it was senior Tina Lee.

"Tina tries really hard, and is a very good defensive player, but she throws her stick a lot," junior Brian Russell said.

Lee was one of the few girls that had ever played hockey with the rest of the guys.

Other brave girls included Nora Horick and Ashley Crumpton.

The guys that played were Brian and Andy Russell, Mr. Russell, Jesse Bryant, David Van Camp, Todd Snead, Jason Wehling, and Leonard Erlandson.

"It's painful when you get hurt really bad," freshman David Van Camp said.

The only serious injuries were Lee's black eye and Andy Russell's broken wrist.

"Breaking anything when you play hockey could be painful, especially when you have no pads on," Russell said. "I hope I never get hurt." by Vickie Lee

The Southwestern Connection

For seniors who qualified, Southwestern University offered a variety of classes that could be taken in place of high school courses. Admission was based on a student's class rank, extracurricular activities, and a short essay.

The variety of classes available ranged from languages to religion to the natural sciences. I chose to take an astronomy class taught by Professor Shaymal Mitra.

The class, which convened three times a week, consisted predominantly of lectures and notetaking. Though my professor's Indian accent at times was hard to follow, and I really don't think my brain capacity quite equaled that of the rest of my class, I am proud to say that I did learn something beneficial about our universe. The most exciting part of class was performing the labs because we all went at our own pace and took our time locating celestial bodies.

The university issued library cards to us which proved beneficial in assisting with research we sometimes recieved for homework.

Overall, I am very glad I had the opportunity to participate in this program. by Drewe Hoppe

Jack Frost Rewards Seniors

Shuffled among the numerous applications and forms deemed necessary to complete the senior year experience, rested the memo concerning the Jack Frost Citizen of the Month Award.

Co-coordinator Linda Taylor founded the award named after former superintendent Jack Frost. Its goal was to reward senior students who have given back to the community.

"It (the award) is based on Jack Frost, who is very dynamic," co-coordinator Sharon Duncan said. "We are trying to show the students that good citizens make a good school."

A committee, consisting of two senior boys, two senior girls, a Student Council representative, and a teacher sponsor, met once a month to decide on the recipients.

"It's hard to decide because there are so many applications, but it's easier because you know them from class and it's not just a piece of paper," senior Elissa Estrada said.

The committee members served for three months and were ineligible for the award during that time.

"There are only five students on the committee, so I felt honored that my teachers chose me (for the committee)," senior Hollie Carlson said.

Each recipient received a $50 savings bond from a local bank and a certificate from the School Board.

A luncheon, usually held on the third Monday of the month, recognized the students and their parents.

"I felt it was a great honor, not only to me but to my parents," senior Shea Posey said, "especially since my sister received the same award." by R. Langenegger

Nap Time

Nap time, the very best time of the day, when students rested in peace and tranquility until teachers woke them up.

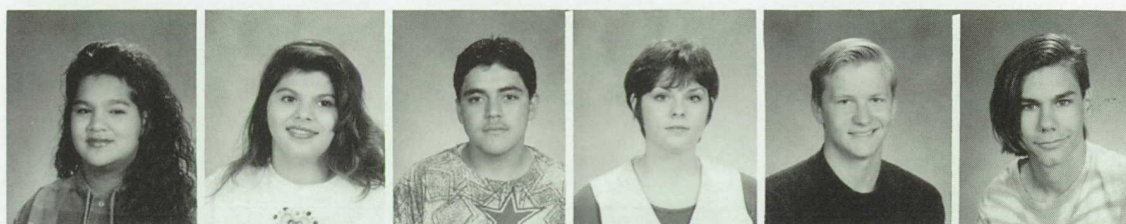

Sometimes it felt good to get a quick charge from sleeping in class and to get out of doing anything.

"We never learn anything, so we might as well catch up on our sleep," junior Nathan Batiste said.

Prom Preparations

HARD AT WORK!!! Before she delivers the candy, junior Jill Dillon studies the orders to see who bought what. Dillon won the competition of selling the most candy. photo by Greg Leinweber

PROM, a rush of girls searching for the perfect look in sequins, velvet, or satin. The guys dashed off to rent a tux before all the good ones were taken.

Before any of this was to happen, the prom had to be planned. This required a tremendous amount of skill, time, dollars and cents.

Members of the junior class were responsible for the fundraisers that were put together by the class officers.

"Selling chocolate around Valentine's Day was fun, and I bought a couple for myself," junior Jill Dillon said. "It was much better than selling tupperware."

The money raised by the junior class provided for the accommodations, decorations and anything else that was a prom expense.

Teachers, sponsors, and students, along with many other volunteers, spent hours working diligently to create the perfect prom.

"Prom is something special, and you only get to experience it in high school," junior Jennifer Zavala said. by Brooke Brown

What is it?

To liven up sixth period photojournalism, and to provide picture taking opportunities, junior Amy Jo Hallmark brought her unusual pet Harry.

Harry, an African Hedgehog, took his time to get out of his rolled up position. Photojournalists watched and played with Hallmark's pet.

"I thought he liked me, but then he bit me," junior Vicke Lee said.

Lee's nick did not qualify Harry as a vicious animal.

"Harry is not a harmful animal," Hallmark said. "He really is a calm hedgehog. He crawls in and just licks my dad's hand." by Greg Leinweber

GET REAL

Students Seek Harmony in Classroom

Students from all backgrounds, cultures, and nationalities came together for one common purpose - to improve relations among the students and between students and faculty at the high school.

Administrators invited a diverse group of 150 students to the first "GET REAL" conference in order to make leaders out of high school students.

The main goal of the "GET REAL" program was to initiate the unity of the students.

At the beginning of the program students played games in order to get to know each other. Once they felt a bit more comfortable around one another, they discussed issues that they felt needed to be worked on within the school. The issues ranged from racism, to student-teacher communication, to reforming the school dress code.

"It was fun and I enjoyed the groups because I got to know a lot of people," freshman Jason Cho said.

After these issues were discussed, they were elaborated upon. Students developed an "action plan" on topics that they felt needed to be changed.

In order to run this conference, the administration hired Ken Serrano and Stephen Medel to facilitate this function.

"Our job is to get students to look at their school and do something about improvement," Medel said.

These facilitators worked with Georgetown PALs for two years before this project came up. Ken Serrano was the executive director of a business called Prevention Education Associates. This business worked with peer assistance programs, such as PALs, as well as facilitated "at risk" camps, peer meditation, large school assemblies, and other general school services.

Overall, the "Get Real" program accomplished its main goal in providing students with the opportunity to voice their opinions about high school.

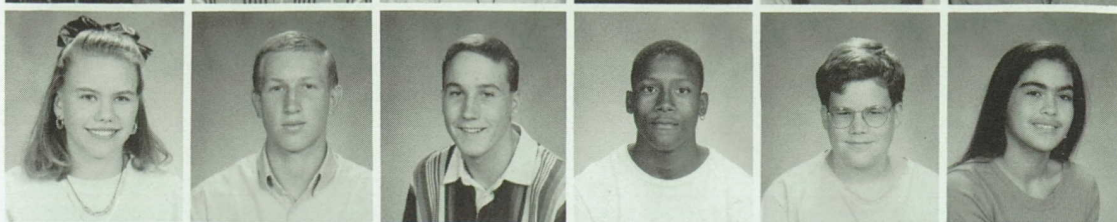

This conference might have been the beginning of a series of changes to reform the school.

"We get students to work together to make a difference in whatever capacity they choose," facilitator Stephen Medel said. by Guadalupe Riojas and Bernadette Hinojosa

Life in the Morning Classes

As the students ran to class, the tardy bell rang to begin their day. They rushed into their seats to be counted as present.

Class began, but the students remained asleep. While two or three students tried to keep awake, the teacher tried to get the students to participate, yet nothing happened.

"I'm always so tired from partying that I can't wake up early enough to arrive at school on time," senior Kevin Mendez said.

The bell rang once again to dismiss the students for their next class. Within the seven minutes they rushed to class a bit more alive. The teacher began as the bell rang for those who would be truant.

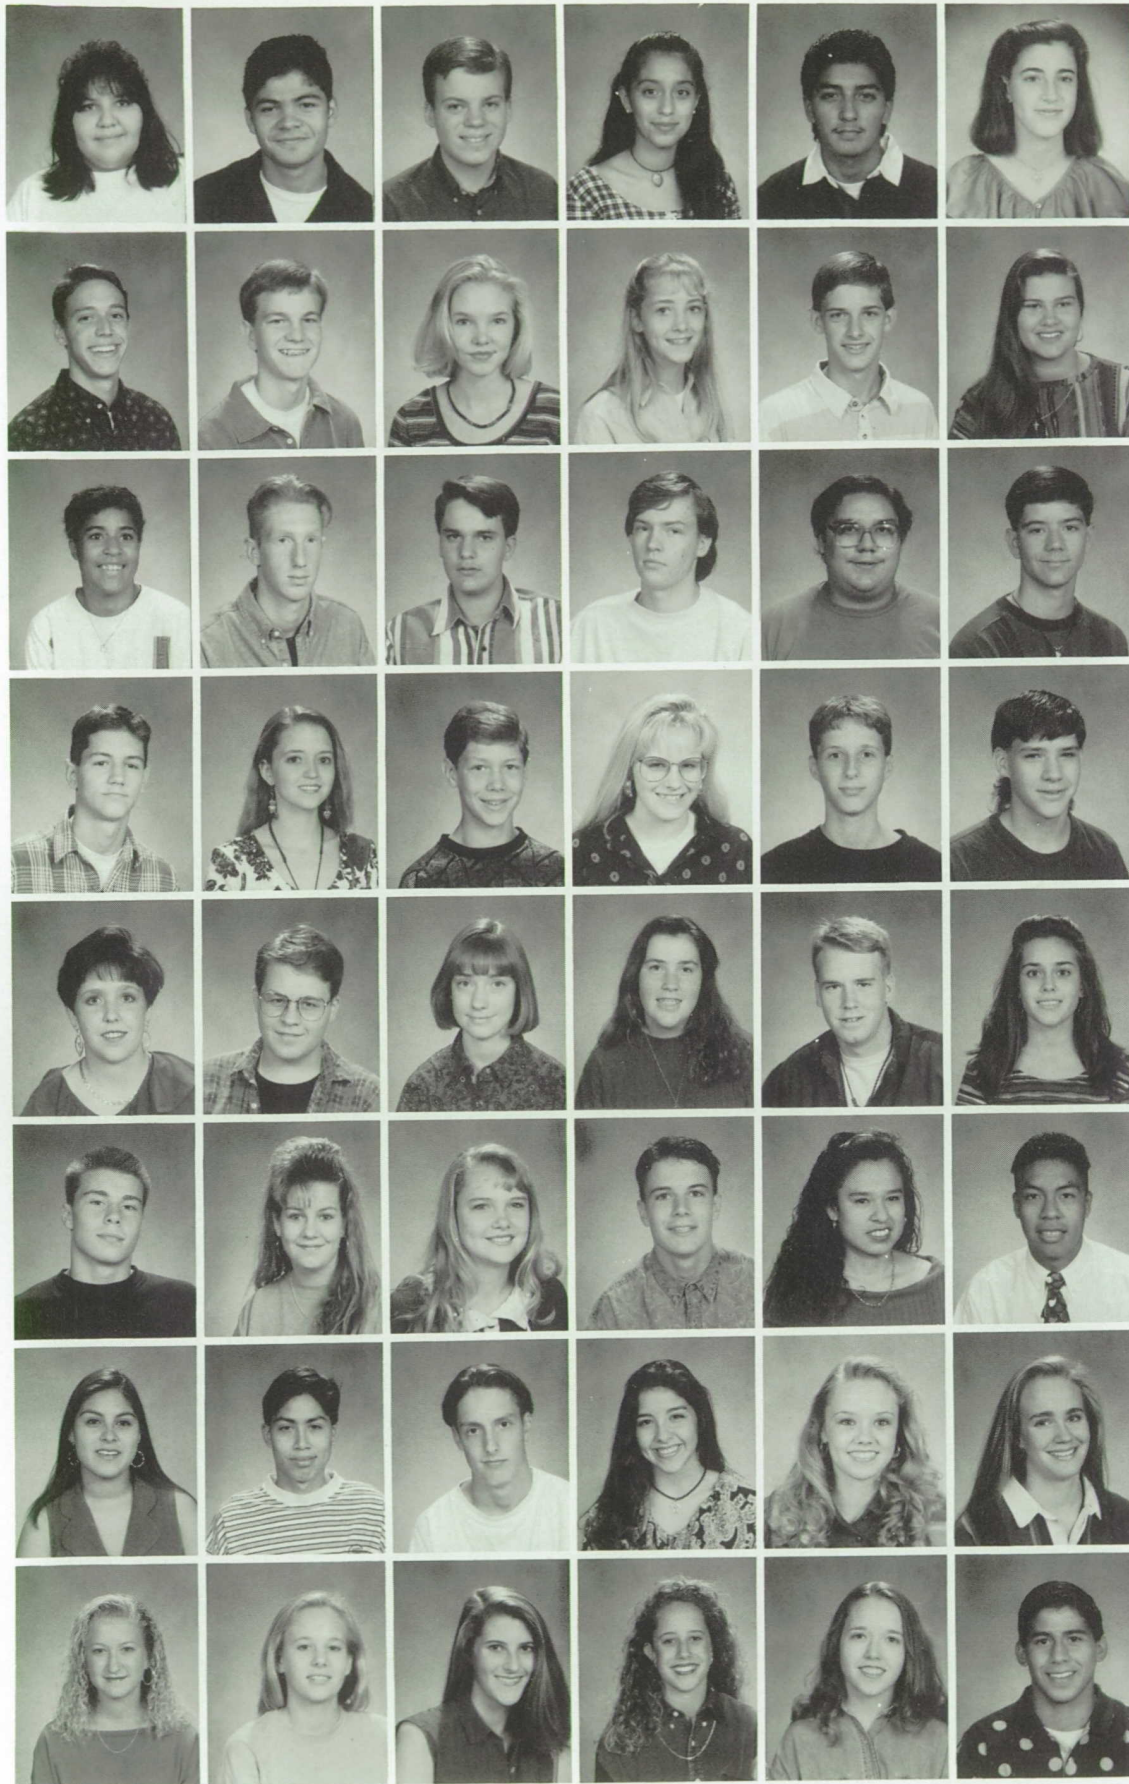

Students' stomachs growled during the second period. They tried to learn

Spanish, however, all they said was "tengo frío."

"We do fun activities, but it is very, very cold," sophomore Molly McWhorter said.

The bell rang again and students went to lunch where their stomachs were filled with food and treats.

"I don't eat breakfast and by first period my stomach starts to growl," freshman Crystal Chaplain said. by Lupe Riojas

A Hectic Day at School

Students rushed through the halls to their class. Some worried about being late, but most gossiped and jabbered about the latest news.

Gutentag, students were greeted by their German teacher.

"I really enjoy learning a new language, especially in a class that moves so quickly," sophomore Sean Conner said.

After German came Algebra.

"I'm always excited, unlike most students I really enjoy Algebra," sophomore Mark Rangel said, "and I learn a lot from Mrs. Tapper."

Finally, students were on their way to athletics, a well awaited period of the day.

"I love having soccer at the end of the day- it lets me release all my energy," sophomore Molly McWhorter said.

By the end of the day, students eagerly awaited the final bell, which released them from their daily ruts. by Emily Masterson and Ruth Langenegger

Making Friends

Between first and second period students had a 15 minute advisory period. The advisory period came about so students from different grades could interact and interchange ideas.

"I think having a mixture of students in different grade levels is a good idea because I would never have met them otherwise," freshman

America Fernandez said.

At the beginning of the period announcements were made.

Following the announcements, the teacher and students had discussions over new changes that had been made, books and their authors, movies and actors. They had a chance to ask questions or do homework.

"I like having an advisory period because it gives me a chance to review for a test that I could have in second period," sophomore Jessica Remero said.

The administration originated the period to help students learn study skills, notetaking, and how to have better self-esteem. Advisory for most people turned out to be a success.

"I really liked having advisory," senior Benny Flores said. by Lupe Riojas

Flower Power

Collecting Just in Time

Springtime.... the bees were buzzing, and the sun was shining brightly. Spring not only brought insects, and sunshine, but it also brought the annual flower collection, a requirement for all biology students.

"I enjoy collecting the flowers, but I just hate to classify them," sophomore Jessica Owens said. "It's really a pain sometimes."

Biology classes had to collect 35 different kinds of flowers and identify their family, genus, species, and location found.

"Collecting the flowers is a lot of fun," sophomore Shannon Moseley said. "It gives my friends and I time to goof around and still actually learn something!"

Most students began their projects in February, when small flowers started to bloom, and turned them in at the first part of May.

It also gave students the opportunity to exercise their botanical and taxinomical skills first hand.

"I never realized how many different kinds of flowers there were in Georgetown," sophomore Jay Stephenson said. "It was a fun project, but I'm really glad it's over!" by Andrea' Smith

An Ocean Crossed

Germans Live Local Life for Four Weeks

Being part of a mini-exchange program has been an experience no one will ever forget, especially me.

To have a German girl my age come and be a part of my life for four weeks excited me more than anything. I could show off Central Texas and see things from a German perspective.

When only 12 Germans arrived with their teacher instead of 13, I was extremely disappointed needless to say. Mine, of course, was sick with pneumonia and had to come one week later.

The week flew by, and soon I found myself back at the airport waiting for her plane. We hit it off immediately. After that, there was no stopping us.

Playing pool routinely, I gave five Germans a ride to my house every day after school, until their hosts were done with after school activities. When they left, we ate, and met everyone again for an activity such as bowling or mini-golf.

Frau Schultz planned many field trips, such as a barbeque at Enchanted Rock and an overnight stay in San Antonio. When Elizabeth found out Iggy Pop was coming to Austin, we got her tickets and even his autograph.

By the time her stay was over I felt like I had a sister. I had someone I could stay up late with and gossip. I cried when they left and am sad that I won't have the chance to do this again.

I made a lot of friends that I will never forget.

Gone Fishin'

It's the inevitable. Every year, everyone knew it was going to happen. Coach Joel Salyer's JV basketball team would win district, the Houston Oilers would find some way NOT to make it to the Super Bowl, and senior guys were going to go after freshmen girls.

I had five best friends and out of the six of us three went out with freshmen girls. One did not go out, but took a fish to Homecoming and to Coronation. One went out with a junior, and one opted to date girls from other towns.

Many people, mostly seniors and some junior girls, did not like this and complained.

"Ya'll guys just forget about us," or "What do you see in them they're so immature!"

Well to all who complained, let's go back a couple of years and think about who forgot about whom. All who complained did the exact same thing when they were freshmen that the senior guys did their senior year.

There was a time when the girls in the senior class could not even remember the guys' name in their own class.

As it is now two of my friends are going with seniors, two are going out with juniors, and one is still going out with girls from other towns, and I am the only one still with a fish.

Senior girls will have college right around the corner where it will be like your freshmen year in high school, only better.

And to all freshmen and sophomore guys who do not like this, you too will one day be a senior and it is WELL worth the wait! by Shea Posey

In For Lunch

As the bell rang for third and fourth lunch to begin, students rushed to the lunchroom. Students had to get to lunch quick before all the lines got too long. Closed campus for third and fourth lunches caused an increase in the number of students and this made the cafeteria loud.

"I hate having closed campus, there's really not much good food to eat," sophomore Samantha Chatman said.

Dominoes sold pizza, and that gave students something different to eat.

"Having Domino's makes lunch a lot better, it's the only thing I eat." freshman Lexi Mealy said.

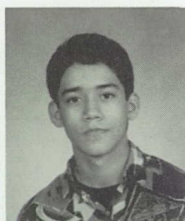

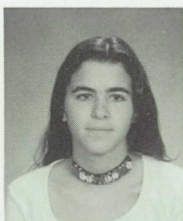

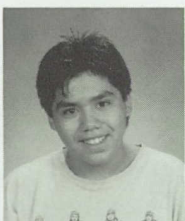

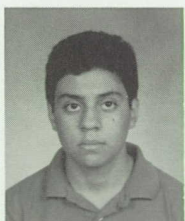

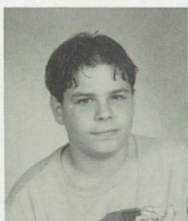

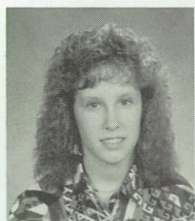

Students ate in the courtyard for more space, since the commons became crowded.

"I love eating outside, it's more relaxing and there's a lot more room," sophomore Erin Hubby said.

Freshman Grows Up

I thought that being a freshman in high school would be a nightmare. I was wrong, it's just a change from junior high, and once I adjusted to the change, it was not bad at all.

It was not very hard, but it wasn't exactly a walk in the park. People kept telling me it would be very hard and that on Fish Day everybody picks on you.

It wasn't as hard as they said. Nothing even happened to me on Fish Day.

High school was good because I met different people and made new friends. But there were some bad things about being a freshman too. I hated being in the crowded halls when the upperclassmen pushed me around. I also felt left out because it seemed like everybody had a car but me.

I didn't know where my classes were, and if I went into the wrong classroom I knew somebody was laughing at me.

It wasn't near as bad as I thought it would be and I know it will get better. by Memory Friedrich

An Unforgettable Year

Crowded halls, one hour lunches, seven minutes between classes - that was high school. For some freshmen, high school was a major change, a big adjustment. For others, it was the time of their lives.

Some classes got harder and some teachers stricter, but being a freshman in high school was not necessarily bad. When 'Fish Day' rolled around, many freshmen expected the worst.

"I expected to be treated more like a freshman and 'Fish Day' wasn't as bad as I thought it would be," freshman

Joel Darby said.

As the year progressed, the freshmen started to blend in with everyone else.

"By semester, I didn't really think of myself as a freshman because I had made older friends," said freshman Nicole Hurst.

Being in high school provided old and new opportunities for just about anyone. There was a variety of clubs, sports, and classes to take.

"I like having all these choices about classes and clubs," freshman Hillerie Staton said. "It makes me feel like I have a choice in my life."

Some people did not like high school, and maybe they never will, but most will never forget their freshman year. "I like being a freshman

Spring Tennis

Again tennis had come, but much stronger than the season before. Spring tennis had begun with more than the regular practice.

"This season is much harder than last year, now we actually work!" sophomore Allison Spacek said.

The coaches really tightened their strings with after school practice every Tuesday and Thursday! Tennis was more than just hitting balls back and forth, it was work and skill put to the test.

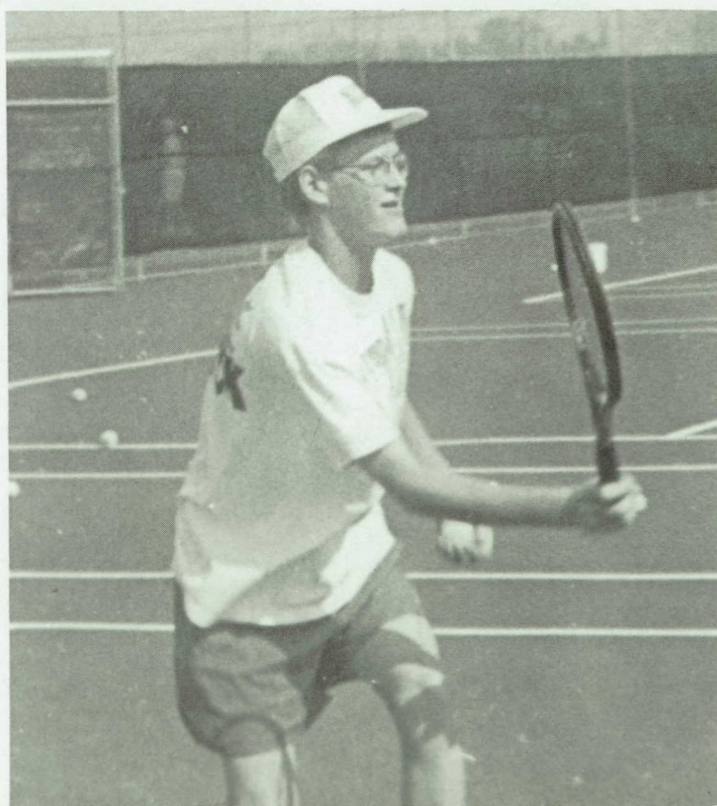

"Every player needs more strength and skill than just enough," Coach

Kerry Minzenmayer said. "I want my players worked hard during class or at a tournament."

Both coaches Landry, and Minzenmayer made special drills for competition, as if in a real tournament.

"I guess everything works out in the end," freshman Amanda Singleton said. "We really need the practice, but I still love to see my name on the ladder,"

Usually in the long run, Eagle Tennis became a big competitor in tournaments. The first tournament starting off the season was Friday January 28, 1994. The players were hyped and ready for competition. by Anna Robinson

Student Support System

Counselors listen, advise, schedule, administer

TYPING AWAY... In her office Yvonne Graham, registrar, works on her computer. Graham kept track of grades and transcripts. photo by Natalie Arab

When students needed help or advice, they went to the counselors' office. There they found an attentive ear and a helping hand.

In order to help these students through the crucial years of their teenage careers, the counselors had to be devoted and talented.

"It's a really rewarding thing to see a young eighth grader move from childhood to young adult during the time that they are in high school and to think I might have helped by touching their life in some positive way," counselor Larry Loudamy said.

Administering tests such as TAAS also fell on counselors' shoulders.

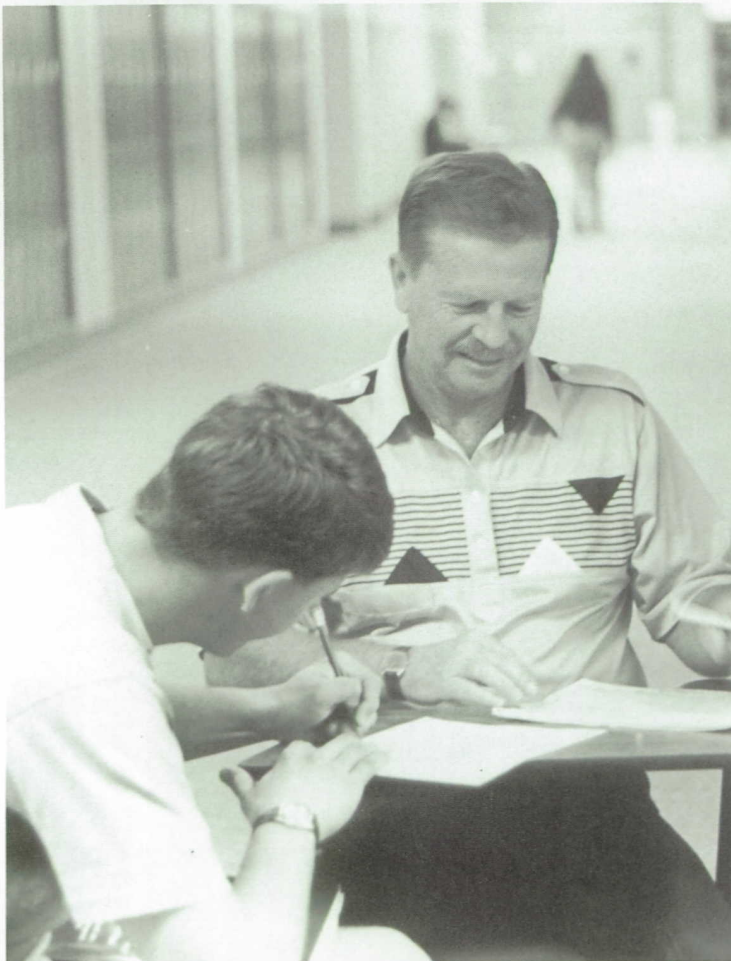

The three counselors, Loudamy, Barbara Ikonen and Robert Foster divided their time among counseling, testing and scheduling procedures to make sure that the students had enough credits to graduate and to be accepted into college.

"I do what I do, hoping that in some way I can directly help a student make appropriate choices in their lives, and therefore possibly have a happier life," counselor Barbara Ikonen said.

The counselors were not the only people in the counselors' office to provide assistance. Secretary Barbara Barr and registrar Yvonne Graham also had their hands full.

As registrar, Graham dealt with registrations and withdrawals of students in addition to grades and class rankings.

"I enjoy working with the students," Graham said. "My most rewarding moment is a smile on a student's face because I don't see students smiling enough." by Natalie Arab and Nicole Walters

A TOUCH OF SPORTSMANSHIP

Sports offered many things to many people. To some, it became the pure enjoyment of being involved in a team event. To others, it represented the prospect of a scholarship, and to some it was just something to do during seventh period.

To most true athletes, however, sports commanded a part of their lives. Not because of an empty space on their schedule, but because they had a love for the game. True athletes were born, not made, because of a mandatory Physical Education requirements.

Students became involved with everything from volleyball to soccer to football to cross country and track. Sports played were as diverse as the students who participated in them. While some athletes remained dedicated to one particular sport, others participated in as many as three or even four different sports.

Obviously, this created rigorous schedules for some students. To the truly dedicated athletes, however, the number of sports in which they participated had little, if anything, to do with their performance. Athletes had to be students also, and in order to play, students had to maintain a passing grade in every one of their classes.

Athletes were unique and gifted people, and students that could juggle homework, tests, clubs and athletics were a step beyond. Some people did not understand why a student would want to go out and run around a hot track or lift weights after a long day of school. When an athlete was asked "Why?", a common answer was heard-"You just gotta' love it."

And that they did.

All the Way Boys and Girls Race at State Meet

Cold temperatures, edged on by even colder gusts of wind, did not stop the 25 AAAA district cross country race from occurring.

Wrapped in warm-ups, windsuits, and anything they could get their hands on, the boys' and girls' cross country teams took to the course. Intertwined among the trees of San Gabriel Park, the course covered three miles for the boys and two miles for the girls.

"The cold weather was better for us because we like to run in odd conditions," senior David Boram said.

In the girls' varsity race, a fast pace and early lead helped Kaci Saenz bring in first place for the girls. Charlotte Graham's and Kristie Killen's illnesses hindered the team, but they still managed to pull off a district win.

"When Charlotte and Kristie got sick we were disappointed, but we still did well," sophomore Natalie Tucker said.

The boys' team won first place with the help of a second place finish from Boram, followed by Nathan Swift in third place.

With the district titles secured, both teams headed for UT at San Antonio for regional competition.

"We could have done better, but we got third and made it to state," junior Robb Cabaniss said.

At the regional meet the girls clinched a first place finish. The boys pulled off a third place finish which insured a trip to state.

Southwestern University provided the course, a familiar one to the runners, for state.

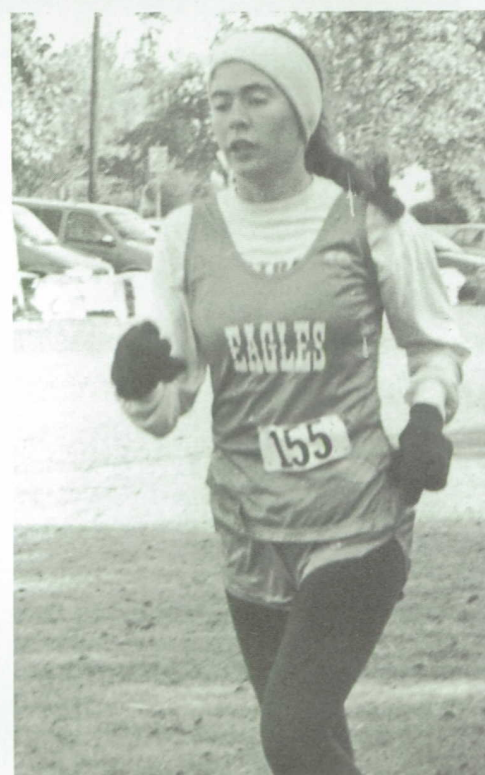

"Knowing the course definitely helped," junior Layne Wilson said.

Rain and heat provided the worst conditions for the runners at the meet. Affected by the weather, the boys finished a disappointing sixth.

"There were problems in the team structure," Cabaniss said. "It was a big let down."

Nevertheless, the girls brought home a State Runner-up title. Saenz led the team, followed by Tucker.

"When we found out we had got second we were really happy and pleased with our performance," Tucker said. by Ruth Langenegger

Spike It Up Varsity Heads to Glory

Lady Eagles worked hard to prepare for district. All the hard work paid off.

"It was awesome!" junior Anjie Patton said.

They ended the year with a first place victory, but it was not easy. Their hardest competitor stood in the way, the Lady Lions of Leander.

The fans worried when the Lady Eagles lost the first match 15-2. Their faces moped, but they knew they could not give up.

Coach Patty Elliot-Esparza called out the line up. Walking onto the court they knew they had to fight. The only thing going through their minds was the two games left to play. The Lady Eagles never gave up!

"We wanted that banner to hang in our gym so bad, and we got it!" senior DeAnn Porfirio said.

Team work and endurance helped them through the second and third games. Though the Lady Lions never gave up, they still could not handle the pressure from the fans of the Lady Eagles.

The third game had almost come to a close. The Lady Eagles, passing up the Lady Lions, spiked the ball down out of bounds. It was over! The Lady Eagles won district, the first time in 10 years.

"It was such an exciting feeling to have our whole team playing at their peak!" sophomore Valerie Henry said. by Courtney Smith

Deja Vu All Over Again

Freshman and JV win Distict

Baseball great Yogi Berrea's famous quote "Deja vu all over again" held true for both the freshman and junior varsity football teams as both teams won the District 25-AAAA title for the fourth straight year in a row.

Though some thought winning four years in a row took the edge off of the joy of victory, the members of both teams believed the opposite. The fourth victory was, according to one of the sophomore linemen, "just as exciting as (if not more-so than) the victories preceeding it."

The team ended the season with a 7-3 overall record. Teamwork was attributed as one of the team's keys to success, as they rallied to win many come-from-behind victories.

"We did so well because we worked together as a team and took care of each other," junior Craig Lira said. "We kicked butt and took names."

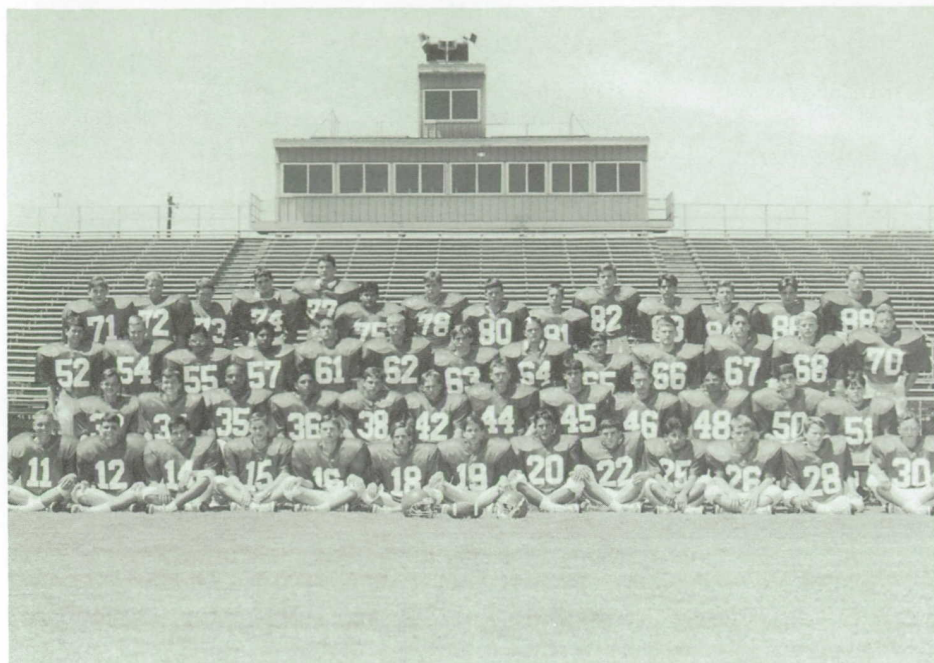

Living up to its reputation of being strong and determined, the team stuck together through many tough games.

Although football is looked at as mostly an all-physical sport, mental preparedness and stability had a lot to do with their victories, especially the ones that went down to the wire.

"We had many comebacks," sophomore Adam Foster said. "Our team really pulled together and had a lot of heart and the ability to win." by Matt Painter

Seniors Go Out With Win Team Unity Plays Big Part in Improvement

Heat. Unrelenting heat.

That is what greeted the 1993 Georgetown Eagle Football players at the beginning of the season. Ironically, it ended in freezing temperatures, a sign of the highs and lows of the season. A final record of 4-6 does not reflect how close the team was to being 7-3.

"We did better than our final record showed," senior Jonathan Purser said.

The team went from having state-ranked Bowie beaten with a come from behind victory, to losing to the rival Taylor Ducks.

"It's good that we improved from last year's season," senior Greg Sprock said. "A 4-6 record is a lot better than 3-7 record. I wish we made the play-offs though."

The team ended the season with a high note by winning its last game against Waco Midway, 17-07.

"It was nice to go out with a win on the last game," senior Thomas Skelton said. "That game was especially fun because I had my best game and made Defensive Player of the Week. All road trips were fun also."

Injuries that depleted the team's ranks took away from valuable practice time as well as taking away valuable players.

Team unity played a big part in overcoming these obstacles. The seniors provided leadership throughout the year. by Ben Knipscher

Lady Eagles Soar to Playoffs

Even though the Lady Eagle basketball team was very young and fairly inexperienced, it did not hamper the team from making a run in the playoffs. Through many heartbreaking losses to district opponents and agonizing injuries, the Lady Eagles persevered.

"The kids were real resilient all year long," Coach Rhonda Farney said.

The Lady Eagles completed a pre-district schedule where they competed in several tournaments including 48 Hours of Hoop Madness and Central Texas Classic to sharpen the team's skills before district began.

"We won three varsity tournaments for the first time in school history," junior Suzanne Koy said.

District 25-4A began, and it was clear that it would be a fight to the end between the Lady Eagles and Waco Midway.

When the dust settled, the Lady Eagles were the runner-up after they had lost two heartbreakers to eventual state champion Waco Midway.

The Eagles still went to the playoffs;

however, facing McCallum in the first round. They defeated the Lady Knights handily, 60-39.

"That was the best team effort we had all year," Farney said. "We got a lot of key minutes from a lot of players, everybody did a great job!"

Next up for the Lady Eagles was Lockhart, in the area playoffs. The girls won a very physical battle, 60-44.

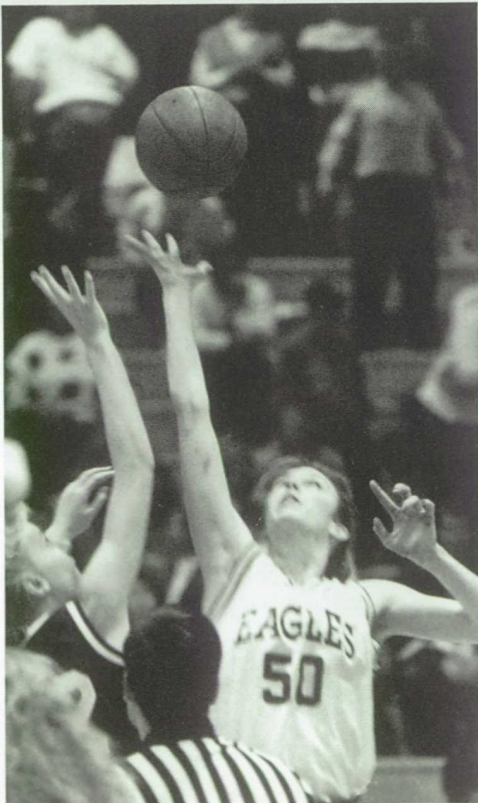

In the Regional Semi-Finalist game, the girls went toe to toe with Tulosso-Midway, but lost a stinging heartbreaker, 53-54. Although the loss ended the '94 season, the Lady Eagles return all players except for two.

The junior varsity captured the district title with an unblemished 8-0 record and 20-3 overall.

"This team had a great season," coach Kellye Richardson said. "I was extremely proud of the way we improved with every game. Just take a look at our record"

Eagles Strive for Success

With four varsity players returning for their senior year, the Eagles expected to challenge for the district title in one of the toughest 4A districts around.

After a very intense pre-district schedule which included L.B.J., Channelview, and state runner-up champion Austin Anderson, who Georgetown defeated two out of four times, the Eagle moved to the district schedule.

The season presented many tests throughout the year, but the Eagles went off with a bang and continued their tradition of playoff appearances by securing a postseason position for the fourth consecutive year.

"These guys really showed what they were made of, they had their backs to the wall and responded by meeting the challenge of making the playoffs," Coach Maurice Varnell said.

The Eagles faced Austin Anderson, their nemesis last year in the playoffs, in the first round, but lost 71-56. This hard fought loss marked the end of a season in which the Eagles never gave up.

While varsity was runner-up in district, the junior varsity continued its tradition of excellence by winning the district title four years in a row. The combined record for the junior varsity was an impressive 33-9.

"We worked real hard through many obstacles to repeat as district champs," junior Josh Hittman said.

The freshman team rounded out the program with a record of 15-16.

Tennis Excels at District

Worn out tennis shoes, broken strings on a tennis racket, a cooler full of snacks for the bus ride home, and the joy of winning tournaments composed the sport of tennis.

Freshman, junior varsity, and varsity tennis teams practiced all year and finally got what they deserved.

Freshman girls placed first in district while the boys came in third. In girls doubles, Tiffany Holstrom and Alisa Cook took home first, Amanda Singleton and Christy Devilleir earned second, and Amanda Minchew and Anna Guerry placed forth. In girls singles Summer Peters came in second while Lexi Mealy took forth. In boys singles Travis Beard placed third.

"All the hard work and long practices finally paid off in the end," freshman player Andy Russell said.

Junior varsity girls and boys both concluded the season with impressive finishes. Girls placed first while boys took second. In girls doubles, Carrie Woodly and Laura Lacy captured first and Yolanda Reyna and Berenadett Hinojosa came home with fourth. Summer Rydel and Amy Robinson took places first and fourth in girls singles. Taking third place in boys doubles was Scott Dorfler and Trevor Ross. Aaron Parkening won third in boys singles.

"They never said it would be easy, but it was definitely worth it," junior varsity player Laura Lacy said.

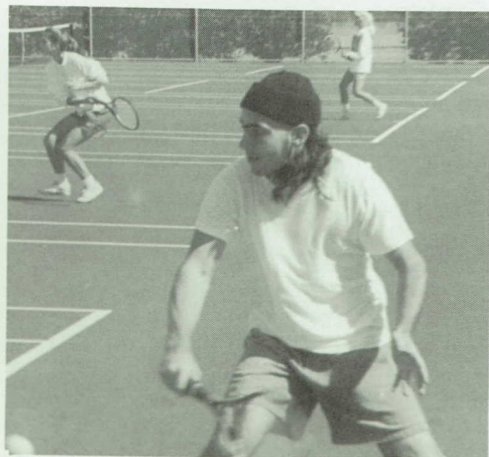

Boys and girls varsity teams both swept district with a tie for first place for boys and a second place for girls. Kristin Davis and Kristina Deichman took third and fourth for girls singles. Ann Michelle Pfluger and Ashely Holmstrom placed fourth in doubles. Chris Clayman and Roy Patterson, boys singles players, took third and fourth. Larry Brumfield and John Peters took home second place and a ticket to regionals. Micah Long and Marcus Edwards captured fourth.

In addition to working hard on the court, tennis players worked hard off the court. They all pitched in together to help out with various fund raisers. Such as the lasagna dinner, which they gave away two dinners to the San Fransico Steak House and Berry Creek Country Club gift certificates.

Overall, the tennis coaches and players felt they had a sucessful year.

"Tennis is like life, you have to take it one serve at a time." player Andy Pfertner said. by Vickie Lee

Coach Butch Spruill kept the girls pumped with his long speeches before each game. Coach Spruill and coach Tarryl Hyder coached the Varsity and Junior Varsity Lady Eagles. JV finished undefeated in district, with a record of 11-0 in season and 6-0 in district.

"It was a very satisfying year," Coach Spruill said.

The Varsity girls ended its competitive season with 7 wins, 14 losses and 2 ties. In district the girls left the year with 11 wins, no losses, and 1 tie. Leander was the only team to tie the Lady Eagles, on a very miserable day.

"It was sad that the last game the seniors would ever play on Eagle Field, was a tie to Leander, the weather causing the game to be cut short," senior Erica Surrency said.

Many players suffered injuries throughout the soccer season. Kim Priess was injured leaving her out of the semi-final game, while goalie Nicole Gilbert left a game with a broken arm.

Swim Team Goes Off Deep End

Like swans in a lake, the swim team jumped into another season of hard swimming and competition.

"Coach Paige Myers is really pushing us hard to get us in shape for the new season," sophomore James Wade said.

Wade swam the 50 free and the 100 free on his individual events. The team kept its tradition of sacrificing morning sleep in order to be up at the Southwestern swimming pool every morning to practice starts, events and to improve their times.

"I feel that I can make it to regionals in my individual events if I practice and try hard," Wade said.

The swim members knew they had some tough teams to beat, but they still had high hopes of finishing the season with some wins.

The swim team went to regional finals in Houston with high hopes of finishing in excellent rankings.

"I never thought I would make it to regionals with my times," sophomore Brian Maxwell said.

The boys and girls both came out with a third place win, which they had won with hard work and determination.

"A few of us guys met a couple of girls from the Round Rock School District," sophomore John Janak said. "We became pretty good friends."

The swimmers always seemed to make new friends at all the swimming events.

"David Matthews and Nisse Perkins, as usual, turned out to be my best swimmers for this season," Coach Paige Myers said.

Coach Myers received the Coach of the Year award as a result of excellent coaching and perseverance from peers.

"The season turned out really well for us, besides, I had a lot of fun with this group of fine swimmers," Coach Myers said with a few chuckles. by Mike Nedbalek & Nathan Batiste

Coming From Behind Soccer Boys Make Playoffs

Varsity boys soccer looked unstable during the first few games, which started with a loss to Killeen. As the season progressed, the boys became more serious and rallied a come back to complete the season with an 11-11-4 record.

"It looked like we weren't going to make it to playoffs this year, but we came together and played to our best ability," junior Chad Smith said.

The team showed its increase in maturity by coming from the bottom of the ranking to the third place spot in the district.

"Coach boosted our morale and encouraged us to play hard and keep a positive outlook on the season," senior Will Burleson said.

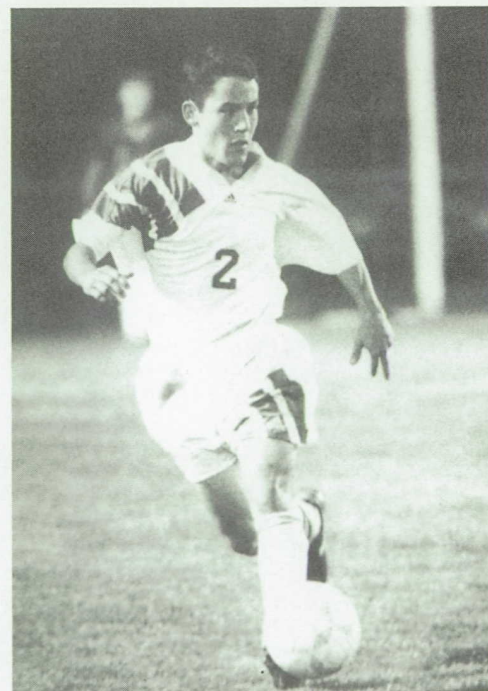

During the playoffs, the boys went three games before they finished the season.

They began with a 1-0 win over Waco Midway and a 2-0 win over Temple, but fell to Tyler John Tyler 3-0.

"At the first of the season I speculated on just how well the boys would do," coach Wesley Kidd said. "But once they got their act together and started to play as a team, I thought they would go far. I had a good feeling about their performance."

The Eagle Heart Award was presented to seniors Benny Flores and Keith Anderson, and Travis Jones and Rob Trostle received an award for the most valuable players. Swim Team Goes Off Deep End

Like swans in a lake, the swim team jumped into another season of hard swimming and competition.

"Coach Paige Myers is really pushing us hard to get us in shape for the new season," sophomore James Wade said.

Wade swam the 50 free and the 100 free on his individual events. The team kept its tradition of sacrificing morning sleep in order to be up at the Southwestern swimming pool every morning to practice starts, events and to improve their times.

"I feel that I can make it to regionals in my individual events if I practice and try hard," Wade said.

The swim members knew they had some tough teams to beat, but they still had high hopes of finishing the season with some wins.

The swim team went to regional finals in Houston with high hopes of finishing in excellent rankings.

"I never thought I would make it to regionals with my times," sophomore Brian Maxwell said.

The boys and girls both came out with a third place win, which they had won with hard work and determination.

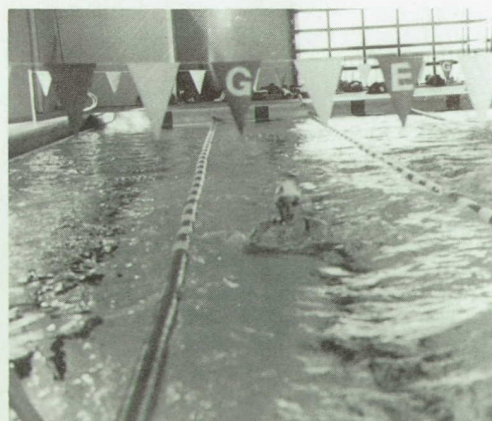

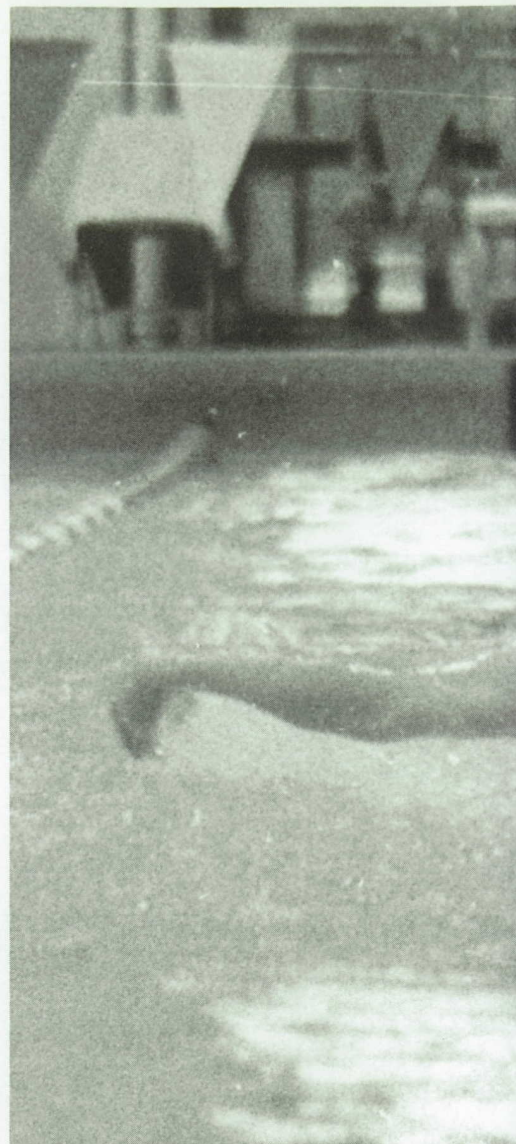

"A few of us guys met a couple of girls from the Round Rock School District," sophomore John Janak said. "We became pretty good friends."

The swimmers always seemed to make new friends at all the swimming events.

"David Matthews and Nisse Perkins, as usual, turned out to be my best swimmers for this season," Coach Paige Myers said.

Coach Myers received the Coach of the Year award as a result of excellent coaching and perseverance from peers.

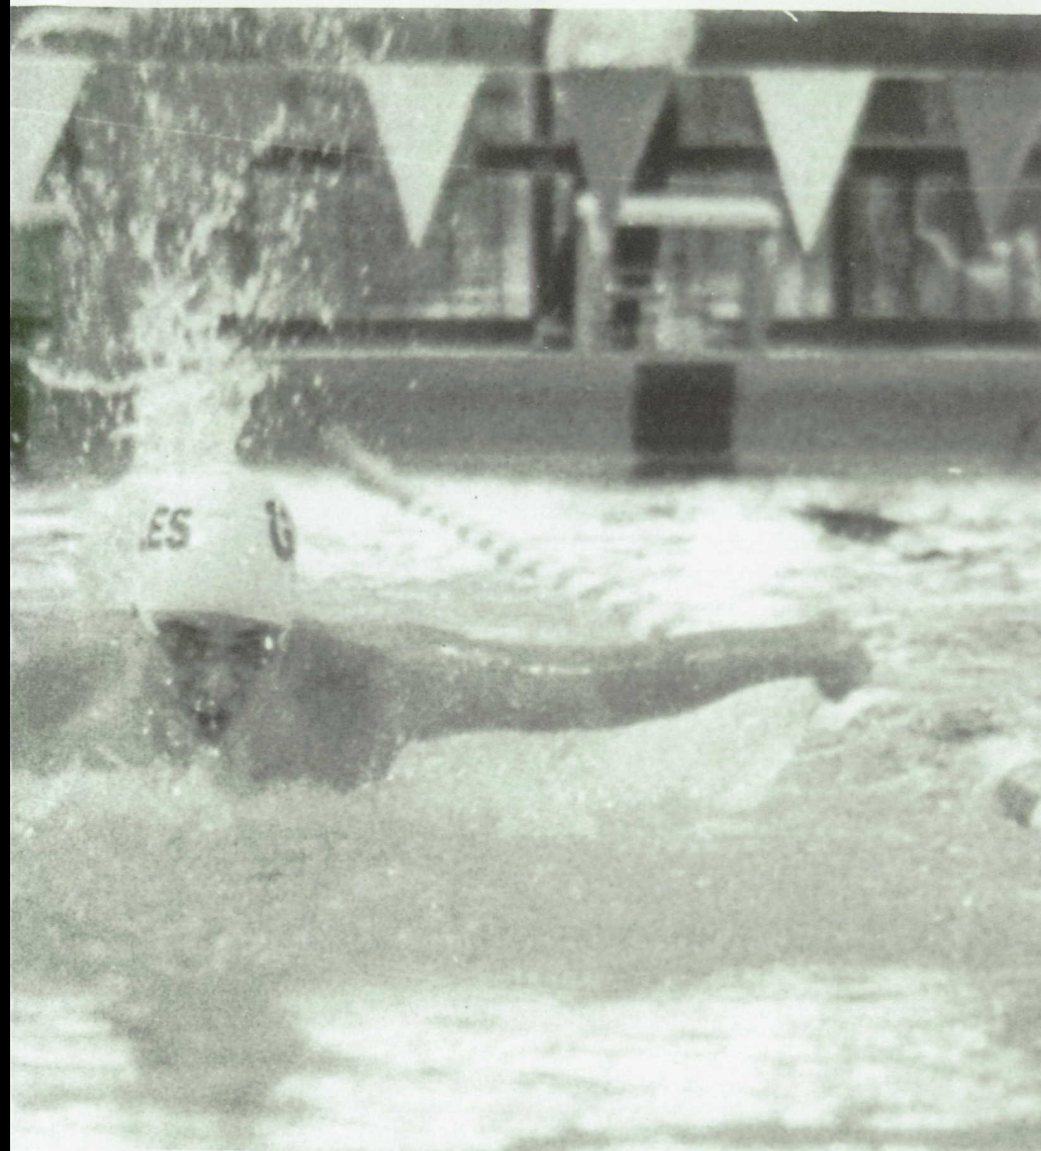

"The season turned out really well for us, besides, I had a lot of fun with this group of fine swimmers," Coach Myers said with a few chuckles. by Mike Nedbalek & Nathan Batiste

Golfers Burn Up the Links

Despite the fact that both golf programs did not advance to the regional championships, all teams turned in excellent individual performances throughout the season.

The highlights for the boys varsity included a season low of 314 in the San Antonio Northside Invitational tournament, which earned them a first place victory.

"That was by far our best effort of the year," sophomore Ryan Tull said. "We finally put it together and won one."

The boys junior varsity also had some great individual efforts, although the team did not win numerous tournaments.

"We didn't do all that well in the tournaments," sophomore Chris Allman said. "But, I almost always had a good time playing in them."

Not unlike the boys programs, the girls teams struggled with consistency, but showed flashes of greatness.

Even though the girls varsity team finished well in most tournaments, they did not advance into the playoffs.

The Lady Eagle team competed in the Leander Invitational at Crystal Falls and finished in the top half of a very talented field.

"Well, we could have done better, but at least we are improving," junior Misty McNeely said. "Maybe next year we'll put it together."

The Lady Eagles team members all shared time on varsity, helping to provide valuable experience and exposure to varsity-level competition that was essential to winning.

"Both teams will return all but one member next year, and I think our experience will really show," junior Jarrod Hamilton said. "After all, practice makes perfect." by Justin Edgar and Matt Bray

The State Of Track

Girls Go To District and Beyond

Some high school sports required specific skills, teamwork, and hours of physical practice. Others required individual efforts, dedication, and mental preparation. Combine these qualities and you get the girls track program.

Headed by coach Jill Warren, the girls track team consisted of 25 to 30 divided into the traditional "varsity" and "junior-varsity" classifications. This had little to do with the efforts or achievements of the girls involved.

Unlike cross country, which many of the girls participated in to keep in shape, track and field events centered more on team work and group-oriented competition instead of the more individual efforts of the cross country program.

"Track really is fun," junior Cara Broadaway said. Most of the girls track members believed this, and it was this attitude that carried the team to district competition and, for some runners, even to state.

While the physical portion of the track program became the primary concern, it was impossible to properly apply the results of hard work if their minds were not also 'in shape.'

While some female sports became somewhat over-shadowed by their male counterparts, the girls track program truly shined on its own. With an attitude that reflected the will to win, the team not only encouraged all those involved in it, but also inspired those who saw them in action. story by Matt Painter

Field of Dreams

If You Build It, They Will Run

Spring, to many, brought the beginning of warm weather, green grass, and the prospect of actually getting out of school. To the members of the track team, however, spring brought something more - the beginning of track season.

Headed by coach John Baskin and assistant coach Mark Townsend, the boys track team consisted of about 40 athletes. These young men competed in such events as the 400, 800, 1600, and 3200 meter runs, the 90 and 120 meter hurdles, and the 100 and 200 meter sprints. There were also various field events, such as the long jump, triple jump, pole vault, discus, and shot put.

Practices took place both before and after school, as well as during the seventh period track class. While an athlete could compete by attending the seventh period class only, most track members chose to work out during one of the other practice times. Most long distance runners ran before school, while athletes involved in field events usually practiced after school.

"I enjoy running in the morning," sophomore distance runner Doug Boram said. "It's easier to run when it's cool, especially during the warmer months."

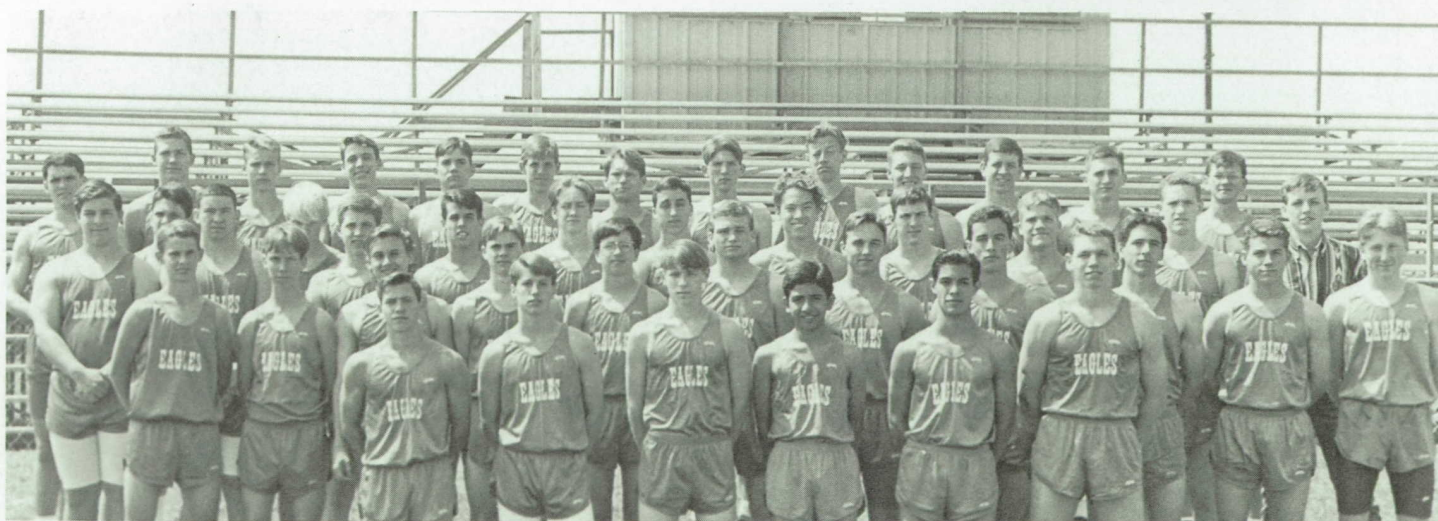

While it took an extra effort to come to the pre- and post-school practices, most students thought that it made a difference in their performance during the track meets.

"I think the practices help everybody do better," sophomore Jay Stevenson said.

Track, however, certainly had its rewards. Winning a meet or placing in an individual event made all the workouts and practices worth it for the athlete fortunate enough to come home with a medal. For most track members, winning an individual medal came second to winning the meet, but they still strove to come home with the gold, silver, or bronze.

"It's hard," sophomore Kevin Sims said, "but with hard work and dedication we all did our best." by Matt Painter

Take No Prisoners

Softball Makes Paths to the Playoffs

Teamwork was what it took to make a great team. Players on the Lady Eagle softball team took a stand and proved that they were able to compete with all kinds of competition.

"I got picked on, pushed, beat up, just because I'm a fish," freshman Christina Edgar said. "But it was a lot of fun."

Although the players had many struggles, they always seemed to work through it and come out strong. Tough practices and complete dedication joined to compose the team.

"I think our hard work and dedication brought us closer," junior Brittany Powers said.

They headed to the playoffs after defeating Temple. They had to beat San Marcos and Round Rock to continue in the playoffs. They fell to Waco Midway, a team they were not able to beat earlier in the season.

"This is my best year!" senior Stacey Sawyer said. "It has not only been just a personal best, but also by the team going to the playoffs for the first time ever."

Playoff Hopes Alive, but Slim

While the players on the varsity baseball team started out with not the best of records, they hung in there as the games continued.

"All we have to do is win one more game and we might slip off into the playoffs," senior Noe Hinojosa said. "I'm playing baseball because I love to play while trying to go as far as we can."

As district play continued the Eagles faced teams that wanted to do the same thing, to make it into the playoffs.

"This year the teams we are facing have given us, and will continue to give us, a challenge," senior Jared Rye said. "They are much more competitive and are giving us a greater challenge."

The Eagles stepped up to meet that challenge head on and hoped to make it to the top. Yet some heavy competition stood in the way.

The Eagles found some strong competitors early and could not overcome them. Their playoffs hopes slipped away as they lost three in a row.

Powerlifters Lift for Success

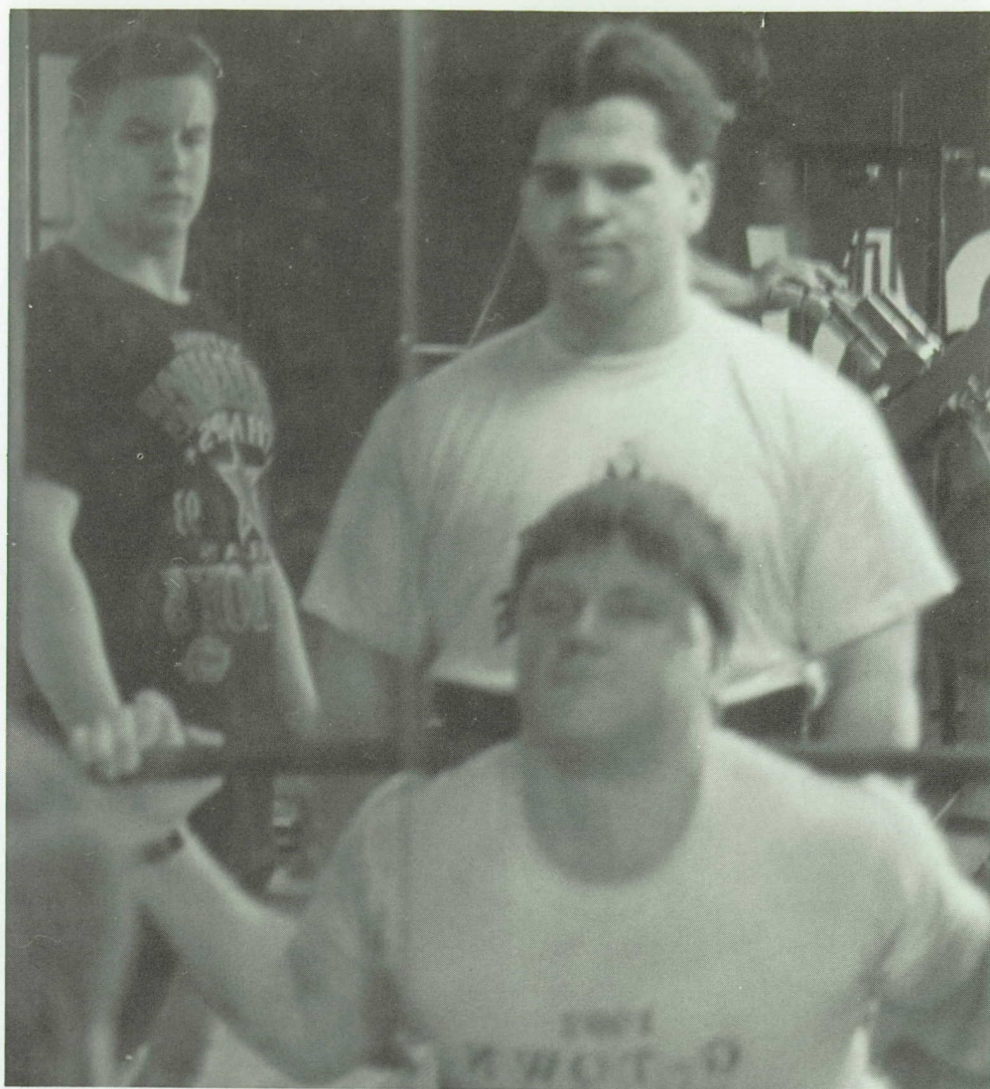

Powerlifting, a very challenging and demanding sport, took both time and strength.

"Powerlifting provides an opportunity for all sized athletes and gives them a chance to be successful," Coach Jim Ward said.

Since 1986, Eagle powerlifters have been part of the Texas High School Powerlifting Association. Invitational meets ran in January till February. The Regional meet was for the top 10 qualifiers in their weight class. The top two competitors in each weightclass advanced to state.

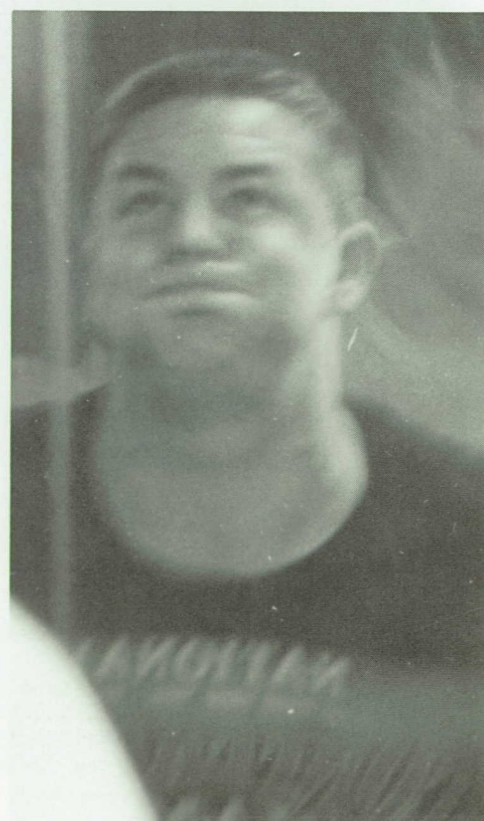

In the State meet Brian Puska placed 4th while Kevin Svetlik came in 5th in the 220 pound weight class and Sandra King took 7th place.

"Many people think powerlifting is just a physical sport, but it is also very mental," sophomore Nathaniel Jansak-Noble said. by Justin Burkhead

Spring Training

Football Takes to Practice Field

With new athletic director and head football coach Larry Moore, came something new to the football Eagles - spring football training.

In preparation for the upcoming football season, several devoted young men tried out their playing skills during football spring training. This meant that guys crawled out of the shells that they had been in for a few months and got back on the field in order to play the game they all know and love.

"We get worked pretty hard, and everybody gets pretty tired, but it's exciting anyway," junior Robbie Marsh said.

In addition to the overall preparation, spring training gave both individual players and the team pre-summer practices and also served a new and different purpose.

The change from a 4A district to a 5A district, to begin in the fall of 1994, dramatically increased the team's need for practice and a larger display of talent and skill by players.

"Practice is hard, but in the long run it will help," sophomore Ryan Rychlik said. "Now that we're 5A, we really need the improvement we're getting."

Perhaps the dedication demonstrated by players reflected a promising future.

"I really hope we can go far," freshman Luis Del Valle said. "I really think this helps us a lot." by Myra Hernandez

A TOUCH OF VARIETY

To make memories and build friendships, students had a number of clubs and organizations from which to choose.

From changing identity in drama to raising livestock in FFA, if it "frosts your cookies," join it! Speaking of frosting cookies, FHA offered a wonderful opportunity for students who enjoyed cooking or who wanted to learn how.

Hours of hard work often became the case with many involved in organizations such as cheerleading, band, choir and Georgettes. These truly dedicated members sacrificed school evenings and some weekends in order to achieve greatness.

As a reward for the hard work, some clubs visited amusement parks and some obtained cash prizes for the animals they had raised. But the greatest reward for many members was the feeling of belonging to a group of people who shared and enjoyed the same interests.

Be it music, cooking, sewing, singing, dancing, cheering, playing sports, etc., everyone could find a club.

Absolute Power Council Rules Student Body

Student Council, the school's student government, accomplished a variety of goals. From dances to food to a voice in school activities, council members handled it all.

"This year we sponsored a treasure hunt for freshmen so they could learn their ways around the high school," senior David Boram said. "It was fun to help them see that the school isn't that bad, or that big."

Government and economics teacher Steven Barber worked with the council as supervisor to guide the students through the planning and carrying out of activities.

Student Council projects included Homecoming, Coronation, decorations for school dances, and concession stands at football and basketball games.

"Decorating for the dances was a little hectic," senior Lauren Moran said, "but in the end they always looked great."

Around the holidays, Student Council participated in the planning of Project Share and the Giving Tree.

"Working in the concession stands was fun," junior Matt Bray said. "Not only did it qualify for community service, but we got free food too!" by Lori Yamka

The Splendor of Music

Marching Band Adds Class to Football Season

With the first football game in August, the music of Igor Stravinsky's Firebird Suite could be heard coming in full force from Eagle Field.

"The music was hard this year," junior Michelle Prellop said. "So was the show, but we still performed the best we've ever done."

Marching in the half-time show required dedication and patience of everyone. Students gave their time, and often sanity, to the learning of their show. Drum Majors Todd Snead and Anna Pennington worked hard to keep spirits up and attention on the task at hand.

"We had a lot of after school and weekend practices," sophomore Stephanie Lechber said. "But I think they helped a lot."

Despite the changes in directors and marching technique, the band had the entire show prepared in time to compete in the Westlake Marching Festival, where it placed a disappointing sixth place.

Following Westlake, the band went on to district UIL marching, where they received a rating of one on their show. After their win at the district level, the band advanced to region/area marching with high hopes.

"Our performance at Westlake was unbelievable," freshman Brandee Newberg said. "I didn't know the show was going to fit together that well."

During the region part of this competition, the band received a one, and later received a one for the area level, but fell short of expectations when it was announced that they would be alternates for state.

"I was really sad that we would miss State competition this year," senior Chris Duncan said. "I'm going to miss the spirit of competition."

Even though the band experienced a great disappointment at not advancing to state, others believed their show was the best in years.

"Everything about this show was majestic," junior Jill Dillon said. "The flags, the sets, the music...It became our story to tell the audience, and I think we did a great job."

With the completion of marching season, the band continued to be an added support to the football team. The sounds of Stravinsky had faded way, but the band spirit remained and will be remembered. by Lori Yamka

Classic Sounds

Honors, Symphonic, Concert Entertain Audiences

With the end of varsity football season, also came the end of marching season for the band. After spending the first two and a half months 200 plus students separated into three groups, the Honors, Symphonic and Concert bands.

Preperations began immediatly for the Christmas desert concert, held annually in the high school gym and commons.

"The Christmas concert is my least favorite thing to do," senior Melissa Prellop said. "Not that I'm Scrooge or anything, I just get sick of playing the same music year after year!"

After the Christmas spirit had passed, rehearsals took on a more serious atmosphere as the bands learned music and prepared for University Interscholastic League concert and sightreading.

For the first time ever, the band program sent the concert band to compete. Under the direction of Sharon Lee, members received a one for concert performance and a two for sightreading.

The symphonic band, directed by Travis Almany, received a one for both its concert and sight reading performances. It was the first year the second band performed in a 4A rank. sightreading.

The Honors band, directed by Rodney Klett, also received ones in both concert and sightreading.

The Big "D" classic brought the Honors and Symphonic bands to Dallas where they both recieved top ratings. The Honors band received the title of overall outstanding band at the competition.

"I was so proud to be conducting that band," Klett said. "The music they made on that stage was absolutely spellbinding."

After returning home from an exhausting weekend of malls and Six Flags, the bands started preparing music for the rodeo parade and the graduation ceremonies.

All in all throughout the year, the students kept up the hard work and dedication known to the band program. They set the standards of excellence for others to follow.

"Band is not about trying to impress the judges or trying to win every contest," senior Jerry Villareal said. "It's about doing something we all love, something we're good at...making music!" by Kelley Schirmer

Dancin' 'n Singin'

Choir puts words to the melodies

Hours of dedication and commitment combined to polish each song and dance.

"I like days we dance because it lets me inflict all of my frustrations on Jason's feet," senior Amanda Polasek said.

Throughout the year those involved in both the mixed choir and the girls choir gave of their talent and time to prepare for upcoming events.

"Although we put a lot of time in, it's still loads of fun," sophomore Megan Vogel said.

With more than 40 students in the mixed choir, the Monday night practices helped greatly.

"The Monday practices are more fun than class because it's not so serious and I get to be around my friends," senior Jessica Harwell said. Choir was more than just singing and dancing.

"Each day it amazes me as I walk into class at how friendly and true the smiles are and how easy it is to have fun while being with such a caring group of people," sophomore Renee Umstattd said.

Throughout the year members participated in fundraisers for the end of the year trip.

Car washes at Hardees, paper drives at Goodyear and tickets sold for dinner at the concerts helped raise funds.

"I think we do a better job of washing each other than the cars that come through!" senior Stacie Crocker said.

One of the choirs most profitable fundraisers was the annual talent show. This gave the choirs a chance to perform in front of their fellow students and prove how hard they worked all year.

"Performing at the talent show gave us a chance to show our friends that it is worth the effort," junior Becky Sellers said.

From performances to fundraisers to Monday night practices, choir personified a composite of learning experiences.

"Speaking from an uncoordinated person's point of view, I feel that choir has helped me control my balance not only in dancing but also in my voice," sophomore Jessica Hobratch said.

Rise and Shine

Georgette Day Starts at Dawn

Six thirty a.m., the sky was still pitch black with a sprinkle of stars shining brightly.

Thirty-six dedicated dancers made their way to the high school auxiliary gym for morning practice.

"It takes a lot of teamwork and practice to make a team great," junior Melissa Mezger said. "I guess we're on our way to greatness."

Sleepy-eyed, the Georgettes stretched until 7:00 and then warmed up with high kicks.

"There's nothing like getting up and doing 100 high kicks in the morning," freshman Alexis Wright said.

The Georgettes participated in two competitions which took place in San Antonio and Galveston.

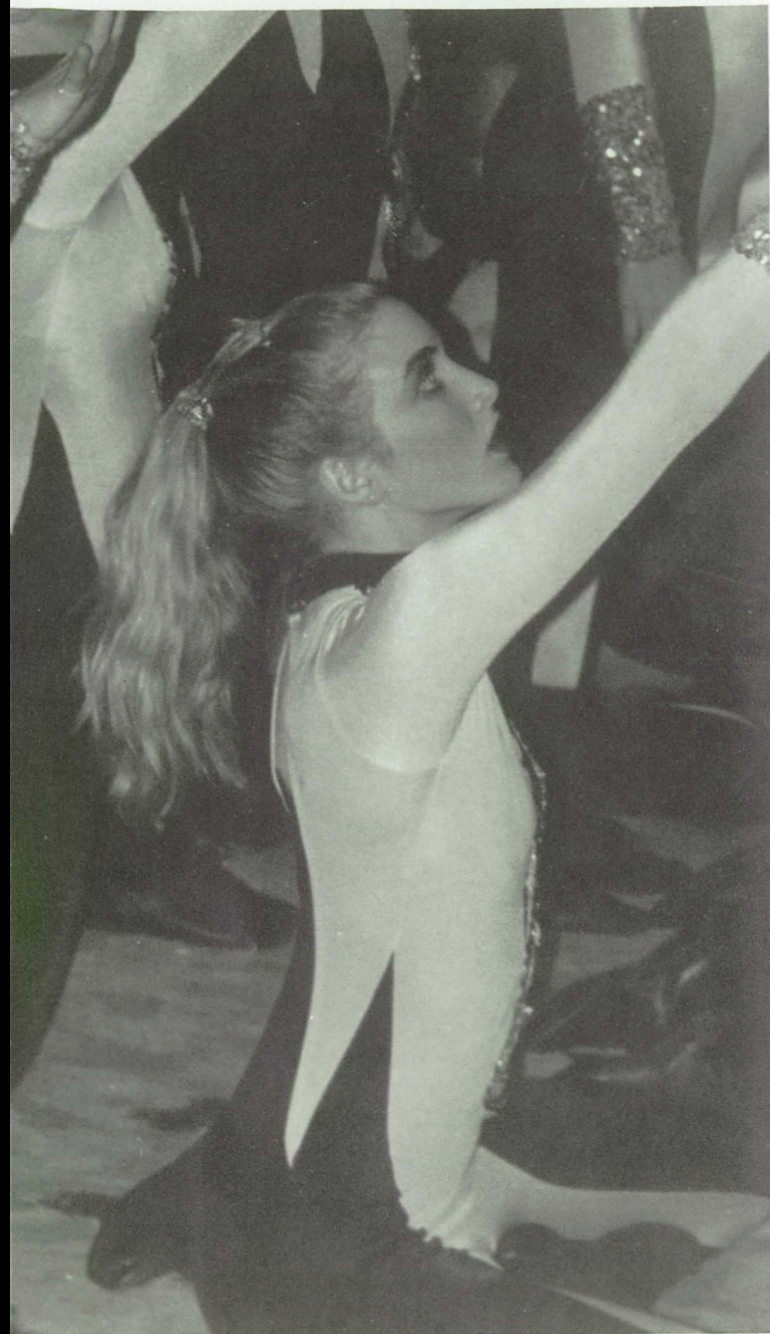

In January, the team danced at the Alamodome for the San Antonio Spurs' competition and received a superior one rating for their prop routine to "Fun, Fun, Fun."

"I'm really looking forward to Galveston," lieutenant Shannon Moseley said. "With all of our hard work, I know we'll do really well. Our team really exhibits outstanding teamwork and discipline this year."

On March 4, the Georgettes also participated in a competition in Galveston. They prepared three routines to perform: novelty, prop, and military.

They received a "sweepstakes" award for all scores 90 and above, a judges award for a superior rating on their military routine, and the "Gussie Nell Davis Award" for outstanding scores on all three dances.

"I feel that I've gotten a lot out of this year," junior Ashley Stork said. "I feel that I'm closer to this team than any other year. Through all of our blood, sweat, and tears, we succeeded in achieving all of our goals that we've set throughout the year." by Andrea' Smith

Cheerleaders Make Friends and Fun

Cheerleaders have been stereotyped as snobbish airheads, but this squad, being quite different, had many accomplishments. As a matter of fact, most of the cheerleaders belonged to National Honor Society.

This particular group of cheerleaders, perceived as friendly people, seemed to be liked by everybody. At Coronation, many received nominations for class favorites and Miss GHS. People liked the cheerleaders because they enjoyed what they did.

"When the crowd got into it you really felt like you had accomplished something," senior cheerleader and Miss

GHS Mandy Hakala said. "The basketball play-off games were the best."

Those who admired the cheerleaders included not only high school students, but also little kids.

"My favorite part of being Georgie was when the kids came up to me and hugged me," senior Betsy MacNabb said. "I loved that."

It was this attitude that made everybody appreciate the cheerleaders so much. Speaking of little kids, even the freshmen cheerleaders got in on the action.

"Being a freshman cheerleader wasn't as bad as people said it would be," freshman Lexi Mealy said. "It was actually really fun."

The cheerleaders formed special friendships, in fact, some believed they had created a family. The family atmosphere, was so strong that in just five minutes the care these girls had for one another could be felt.

"Cheerleading was an experience that was not only lots of fun, but created many great friendships that will last a lifetime," junior Jennifer French said.

To sum up the personality of the cheerleading squad, "A smile is a curve that can straighten out most any situation," junior Abigail Pfister said. by Shea Posey

Language Clubs Explore Foreign Cultures

Wie geht es ihnen? Bien Gracias! Those who participated in one of the foreign language clubs understood. Choices consisted of German, Latin, Spanish, and French.

German club undertook several projects, their efforts focused primarily on the foreign exchange program. In this program, German students from Norden, Germany stayed with families of German club members.

"Our primary goal is to provide the exchange students with a meaningful taste of American culture and living," senior Lauren Moran said.

Spanish classes graced the audience of the "Miss Año Nuevo" pageant with male students representing each club, masquerading as women.

"We use money from the admission tickets to the pageant to give away scholarships to seniors," senior Lisa Hall said.

Latin club members sold candy-grams to raise money for scholarships which were awarded to club members. The group of 80 Latin club students congregated to vote and award the scholarships to the most qualified and deserving seniors.

French club members worked on raising money for five scholarships. These were awarded to the five seniors active in the French club. Members raised money by a raffle for a chance to win a free dinner at Chez Nous. Other sources of funds came from a bake sale and the sale of environmentally friendly products.

These clubs gave students the opportunity to get to know others and to participate in activities to better themselves and the community. With hard work and dedication to their purposes, the job was well done. by Andrew Bacelis

Three Groups Take Charge

Three organizations, Key Club, PRIDE, and PALs, served as positive reminders for others, and their purposes ranged from community service to informing to using leadership skills.

Key Club, sponsored by physical science teacher Rae Ann Gerken, focused on social and community services that students put into action.

"Key Club has given me an opportunity to meet many new people and give assistance where I am needed," sophomore Yolanda Reyna said.

Positive Reinforcement in Drug Education, PRIDE, sponsored by Social Issues Coordinator Barbara Pearce, was developed to show the realities of drug and alcohol abuse among teenagers. For the first time PRIDE sponsored Prom Promise, which encouraged students not to drink on Prom night.

"It took a lot of hard work, but it was for a good cause, and the outcome was great for our first year," junior Brooke Brown said.

PALs, Peer Assistance Leadership, was the third group to take charge.

Sponsored by Coach Joel Salyer, PALs focused on forming leadership and supportive role models. These students worked with elementary school aged children and high school students, as well as each other.

"PALs is fun, educational, and a good group to learn leadership in," junior Tess Milford said. by Jill Dillon and Greg Leinweber

Drama and Speech Give Their All

The drama and speech clubs worked hard to perfect their performances by spending hours before, during, after school, and even on weekends.

It became difficult to separate the classes from the organizations. Perfection often paid off when a performance went well and overwhelmed the audiences.

The sight of the little theater being packed became familiar. Carla Jackson, the Theater II and III teacher, took a break directing when her classes took it upon themselves to direct two of plays.

Theater II performed a farcical murder mystery, "Streuth," during its first period class. Junior Abigail Pfeister directed "Streuth."

Theater III performed a hand written script of "Cinderella" to elementary students. "Cinderella" was directed by senior Shannon Silva.

Theater I students were introduced to Monica Reagan. Her classes performed two plays, "Streuth" and "Passion, Poison, and Petrification."

"Ms Reagan's really cool," senior Byron Vargo said. "She's a different kind of teacher."

Both Reagan and Jackson directed the University Intercholastic League's, UIL, competition performance of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible."

Along with the production of "The Crucible" came "You Can't Take it With You," directed by Jackson; and "Four Farces" by Chekhov, directed by Reagan. "Four Farced" was a four play combination performance made up of "Smoking is Bad For You," "The Bear," "The Wedding," and "The Proposal."

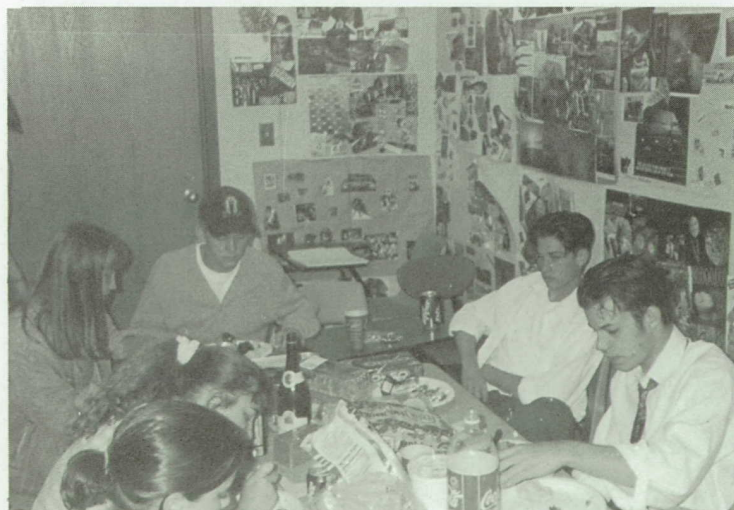

"I love theater because it helps me explore parts of me I didn't know were there - like ballet," junior Kim Priess said.

Speech also received its share of attention. Speech placed in the extemp, debate, and pros and poetry categories during its portion of UIL competition.

Tina McKay's speech club put together "The Night of Performance," which consisted of several speech members performing some of their best speeches, poetry, and dramatic scenes.

"We have a lot of fun," senior Brandi Boyd said. "We show it through our work."

Speech recieved help from Mr. Clark and Mr. Lenden during McKay's maternity leave. They helped with the weekend tournaments and other activities. story by Jana Phillips and Laura Miller

Creme de la Creme Top Students Rewarded for Work

Determination provided the key for those students who strived for academic excellence. Unending hours of class work and community service helped these students attain their best.

Rewards such as National Honors Society and Rotary Scholar encouraged these students even further.

"It's nice to be recognized by the community for all my hard work," senior Roy Patterson said.

Community service was just part of the requirements to become a member of NHS.

Students were expected to maintain a 90 average in regular classes or an 85 in honor classes.

"Keeping my grades up for NHS takes a lot of time, dedication and just a daily effort," junior Tiffany Duke said.

Once inducted, each member performed four hours of independent service projects and participated in two required projects for the year. The projects ranged from Project Share at Christmas to the Eagle Hotline for children alone after school.

"I think it is good to go out into the community and do something that benefits other people," senior Amber Pearce said.

Those seniors who kept their grade point average at a 93 or higher were named Rotary Scholars. These individuals received a luncheon in their honor, a jacket provided by the local Rotarians, and recognition at a football game.

"I'm proud to be a Rotary Scholar, but I only did it for the nifty jacket," senior Jason Wehling said.

A Style of Their Own

Aerie, Talon Record Memories on Paper

For the rest of the school, the end of summer symbolized the beginning of school. For some members of the Aerie staff, it meant yet another short vacation.

While students went on family trips, the dedicated members of the yearbook staff spent most of their mornings and afternoons working on the annual.

"Being on the staff means dedication," senior Ruth Langenegger said. "It's the only way to get things done."

While the yearbook staff gave up its summer, members of the Talon gave up their time after school.

"Although Mrs. Easter-

ling is a lot of fun, we actually have to produce work by the end of the week," senior Angela Rigsby said.

Whatever sport happened to be in season, one could always see the familiar face of the school's photographer. No matter how busy his schedule tended to be, he always managed to find time to take the pictures used throughout the year.

"Taking the pictures isn't as hard as it seems," junior Andy Armstrong said. "I had fun going to all of the games and seeing the action. I think I may have captured some of the most memorable shots."

During the school year, the members of each staff did their work with only the students in mind.

"It's hard finding new and exciting topics to write about," senior Lauren Moran said. "You have to consider all of the different tastes and write for the masses."

Through all of the hard work, staff members formed friendships that lasted throughout the year.

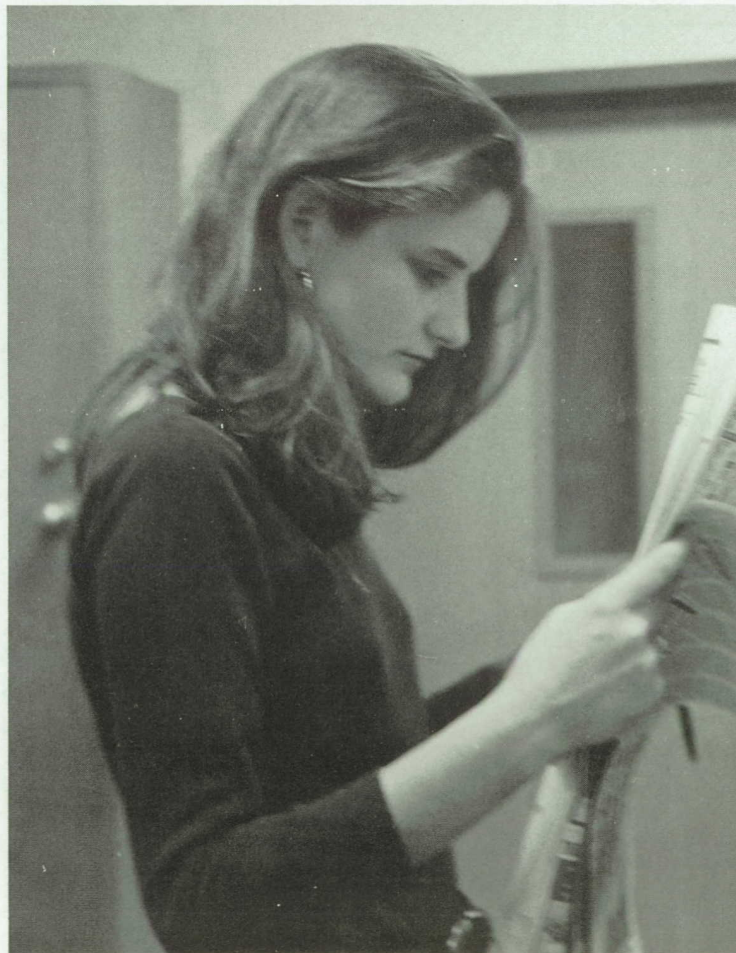

"Because we had to spend so much time together, I got to know the class really well," junior Kelley Schirmer said. "We formed memories of our own which we displayed through our writings." by Lori Yamka

Mind Enhancers

Clubs Stress Mental Activities

Hundreds of students each year joined the numerous clubs that were available to them, often for the sake of college applications. However, some organizations offered education and fun activities which lured prospective members simply for those reasons. Three of these were Junior Historians, Chess Club, and Science club.

One of these, the Science Club, directed the majority of its activities towards educating the students about environmental issues. T-shirts with colorful pictures and catchy slogans were sold in an effort to arouse awareness about problems such as endangered animals. In addition to this, the club sold daisies to the students for the '60s pep rally in order to regain some of the spirit of the flower-child era.

"All of our activities were really fun because they were unique and set us apart from everyone else," senior Heather Norden said. "Plus the club was small and very laid back."

The Chess Club, a new addition to the school, offered students who enjoyed deep-thinking games the opportunity to be involved in a club which adhered to their tastes. The meetings consisted of several on-going games with the players in silent battle. For most members the games relieved stress.

"Chess can be a difficult game," senior Heather Rose said. "But if you understand the rules it becomes easy."

In the future the chess players hope to participate in competitions. Though an organized program did not exist for them, the members intended to work on establishing competitions.

The Junior Historians often attracted members as a result of their fun activities, such as attending the Renaissance Festival held annually in East Texas.

In addition, the club, by request of Principal Gary Crowell, created the first annual Wall of Fame, which honors past graduates for their accomplishments achieved in their careers as well as in their community. A committee comprised of students, teachers and administrators carefully selected each recipient of this distinguished award.

"I'm really excited that our club got the chance to coordinate this award," said senior Shelley Schooley. "It's a very special honor that will be displayed forever." by Drewe Hoppe

FCA Finds Time to Play, to Pray

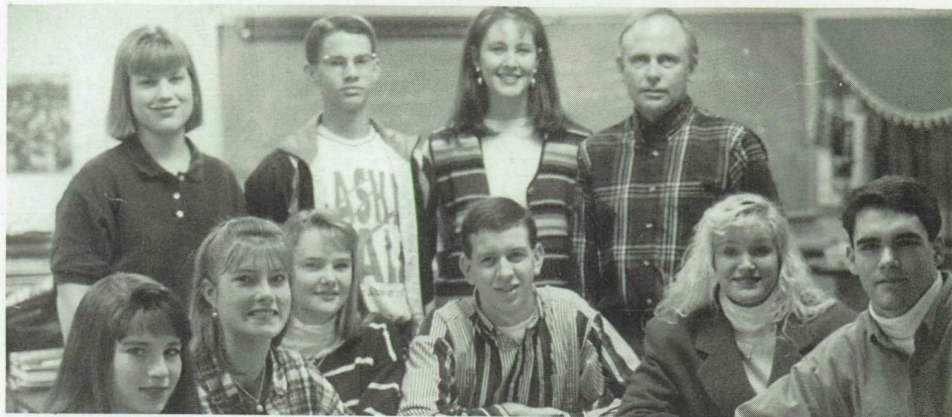

FCA, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, was a national organization.

"FCA is fun because we do community service and build fellowship in a fun way," senior Shea Posey said.

Their community projects ranged from Creative Playscape to Special Olympics. At the end of the year they took a trip to Six Flags.

"It is always one of the bigger events," said senior Bruce Miller.

FCA did many things throughout the year besides community service and fun outings. They usually built fellowship or had speakers come to talk of their experiences with Jesus.

FCA OFFICERS: (front) Kristin Davis, Brittany Christianson, Valerie Henry, Shea Posey, Shannon Sivertson, Chris Miller, (back) Jarred Whittman, Katherine Jones, and Butch Spruill

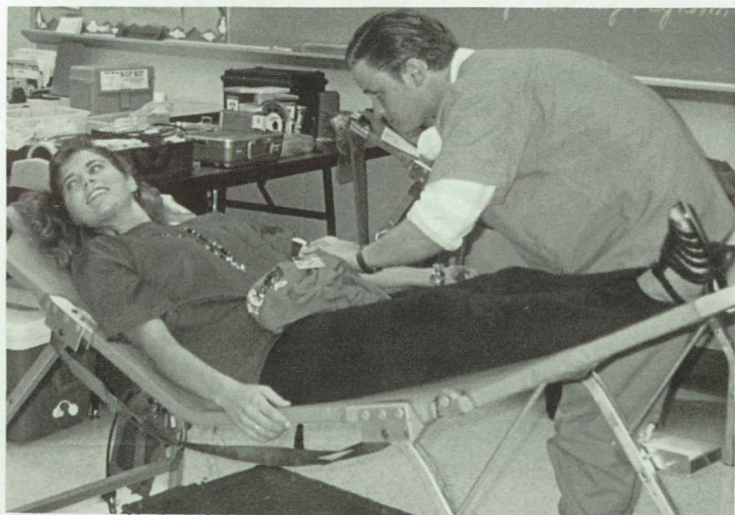

"This year we had a shanted cornibus, a UT volleyball player, and her boyfriend, a swimmer at UT known for going to nationals all come and talk to us," senior Jarred Whitman said. "That was smooth."

Fellowship was one of the keys to this group. Everybody always wanted to become friends with people of the same beliefs.

"I love FCA because it builds great fellowship with Christian friends," junior Jennifer French said. by Shea Posey

ARE YOU SERIOUS??? Even though HOSA required dedicated students, Betsy McNabb still found humor in her fellow students. The Health class occasionally stayed in school to learn new breakthroughs.

They Want Your Blood

HOSA Sponsors Blood Drive

Health Occupations students, clad in red T-shirts claiming "I do it for the cookies," coersed over seventy students and faculty members to donate blood to the Central Texas Blood Banks in early May.

The vampires required that donors be 17 with parent permission, have their Social Security card, drivers license, and meet a list of requirements that included: weighing over 110 pounds, not HIV positive, not having tattoos or nonsterile ear piercing in the last year, and countless other exemptions.

Donors had to have eaten a good breakfast in order to give, and their rewards included an endless supply of cookies and cokes, a T-shirt and the satisfaction of giving the gift of life. In exchange, students braved a monster needle and pumped out a pint of blood. Some students were very frightened, but friends lent moral support.

"I was so scared!" senior Sarah Reiersen said. "I thought I might faint, but Mandy Hakala stayed right with me and I made it out alive."

Others were confident and claimed they didn't feel a thing. Most students took advantage of the opportunity to miss class time, even though they felt the pinch.

"Missing class was definately good. I also wanted a T-shirt to say I did it," senior David Boram said.

"The finger prick hurt worse than the needle."

HOSA sponsor Nancy Zenner said that every slot was filled and expectations were far exceeded. The school received credits at the blood bank, so any student who ever needed blood would have it readily available. The event was so successful, that HOSA officers plan to make this a tradition.

"It was really neat to see students coming together for a good cause even though it was painful," HOSA president Jennifer Pearce said. "Students really do care about pepole, even if we do have to intice them with cookies and skip time." by Layne Wilson

Hands On

Experience Teaches Valuable Lessons

In order to help high school students prepare for their future careers, clubs such as TAME, BPA, DECA, and TAFE offered a variety of opportunities to learn about different occupations.

TAME, Texas Alliance for Minorities in Engineering gave students a background on the engineering disciplines, provided a chance for students to seek college information, as well as exposed them to college environments.

"It has given me an opportunity to explore in more detail the different engineering fields," junior Jose Gomez said.

BPA, Business Professionals of America, educated students about different job fields and how to prepare for them. BPA members participated in several competitions in which they were challenged to perform tasks in a simulated working environment.

"Participating in this club helped give me the look into the business field to try to get the feel for what I'll be doing for a living," senior James Tanner said.

DECA, Distributive Education Co-op of America, was involved in taking tests over a particular marketing area. Competitors from the DECA organization participated in a state competition and also received on-the-job training.

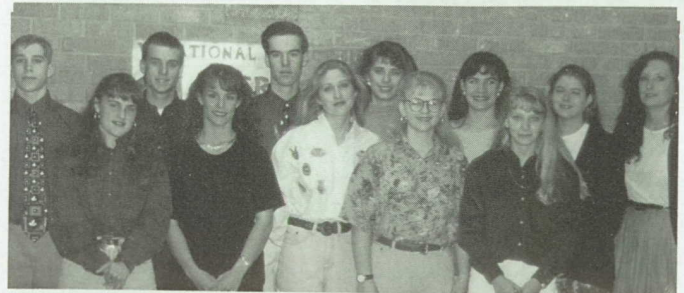

TAFE, Texas Association of Future Educators, was an organization that supported students that wanted to be teachers or educators.

Learning the Rules

FHA, FFA Cover Much Ground

Getting a head start in life were some students' intentions when they joined career related clubs. In FHA, Future Homemakers of America, and FFA, Future Farmers of America, students' mottos were to learn to live a better tomorrow.

"FHA is a fun and interesting club I'm proud to be a part of," senior Lorraine Fox said. "I love working with the kids."

FHA helped students

develop leadership skills for the future. By sponsoring the Fall Carnival, Christmas Stroll, and Make a Wish Foundation, students had the opportunity to interact with each other and the community.

"When you see the shine in a child's eye after you fulfill a wish," senior Denise Arnold said, "it makes you feel wonderful."

The FFA class taught agriculture, but the club taught responsibility.

Students raised and trained animals for competitions, only to later sell them.

"FFA filled us with a lasting view on the world around us," sophomore Tina Taylor said. "It proved to be a great class if you put a little work into it."

Advancing in a successful career could be a long and tedious road. FFA and FHA prepared members to conquer the world. by Hilari Krueger and Emily Schmidt

Brittany Siezmore, and seniors Jennifer Chapman and Lorraine Fox discuss the festivities. FHA was proud to be a sponsor of the Stroll.

Work Work Work

VICA Trains Builders, Welders

Numerous students felt a need for classes that could give them job skills to aide in deciding on a future profession. Auto mechanics, general construction, and commercial welding did this with flying colors.

Members of these classes became eligible for membership in VICA.

"Welding is fun and beneficial," senior Tom Skelton said. "The instruction couldn't be more thorough."

After being in the class two hours a day for two years, the Associated Welding Contractors would grant students an apprenticeship due to the fact that they had the necessary job skills to be a professional welder. Acetline, propane, and cutting torches were all used to train these students.

"Welding gave me job skills, hours of enjoyment and the security of being able to get a job if the college thing doesn't work out," junior Nathan Manhart said.

Like welding, general construction students also gained job skills through hours of fun.

"I learned discipline and an abundant amount of job preparation", sophomore Gabriel Hurtado said.

General constructionn followed the same procedures as welding. Association of Building Contractors also gave students an apprenticeship.

"I took the class and was able to get into the corporate world of building," L.J. Hauser said.

Vocational Education provided students with skills and fun.

"Vocational Education is indeed the classroom of the future," welding instructor Larry Connolly said. by David Hauser and Doug Wheeler

VERY BORING!!! In class senior Thomsam Skelton checks out tools to the people in the class who need the tool. Most of the time students worked on projects. photo by Doug Wheeler

I HATE TESTS!!! Working on a testing, junior Landon Glass does a overhead weld so he can pass the class. Those who passed the class received the welding certificate. photo by Doug Wheeler

SUPPORTING THE CLASS

To bond with the community and escape the monotony of classroom life, Stephanie and I (Sandy Smith) jumped into the car, sometimes the truck, and headed into the big city. As owners of vehicles, the privilege was ours to venture down the road to sell ads for the Aerie.

Businesses opened their doors with kind smiles in order to replace their ads from the previous year. Unfortunately not all the doors opened with kindness, quite the contrary. Stephanie figured they just had a bad hair day.

We encountered many different personalities on our expeditions. We didn't receive many rejections. We learned about the generosity of the community when they lent a helping hand. We learned how lucky we students were that the local businesses provided us with so much support.

We appreciated all the local businesses, families and students who gave us their time and support in order to make the publication of this yearbook possible. by Sandy Smith, Stephanie Knight, Kelley Schirmer

WHERE'S WALDO??? As they wait for the ceremonies to commence, the crowd watches the graduates take their seats. The community supported the graduates through numerous scholarships donated by local organizations.

I THINK I CAN, I THINK I CAN... On a hot Saturday morning, senior Ryan Christianson works his way up a cliff at Reimer's ranch. Climbers went to Reimer's ranch on weekends to polish their skills on the limestone. photo by Andrew Bacelis

Spring Has Sprung

Spring Brings Sports, Freedom, Sunshine

Spring's arrival brought more than good weather as enthusiasm filled the halls with the season change. Before the official arrival of spring came Spring Break. This gave a majority of the students a break from the stress of school and work.

"My family and I are taking a five day cruise to the Caymen Islands then Jamaica," sophomore Jeremy Brock said. "I've been ready for this for over a month."

Spring Break was not the only sign of approaching spring. The season brought along soccer playoffs, district tennis, softball tournaments, prom, Georgettes' spring dance and baseball.

"I love spring because it brings track," sophomore Kristie Killen said. "The relays are great, but hurdles are my favorite!"

Even though numerous school related activities attracted students, they still found the time to play volleyball, water ski, or just hang out.

"School is almost over," junior Sara Kohutek said. "One more month, and we are out of here."

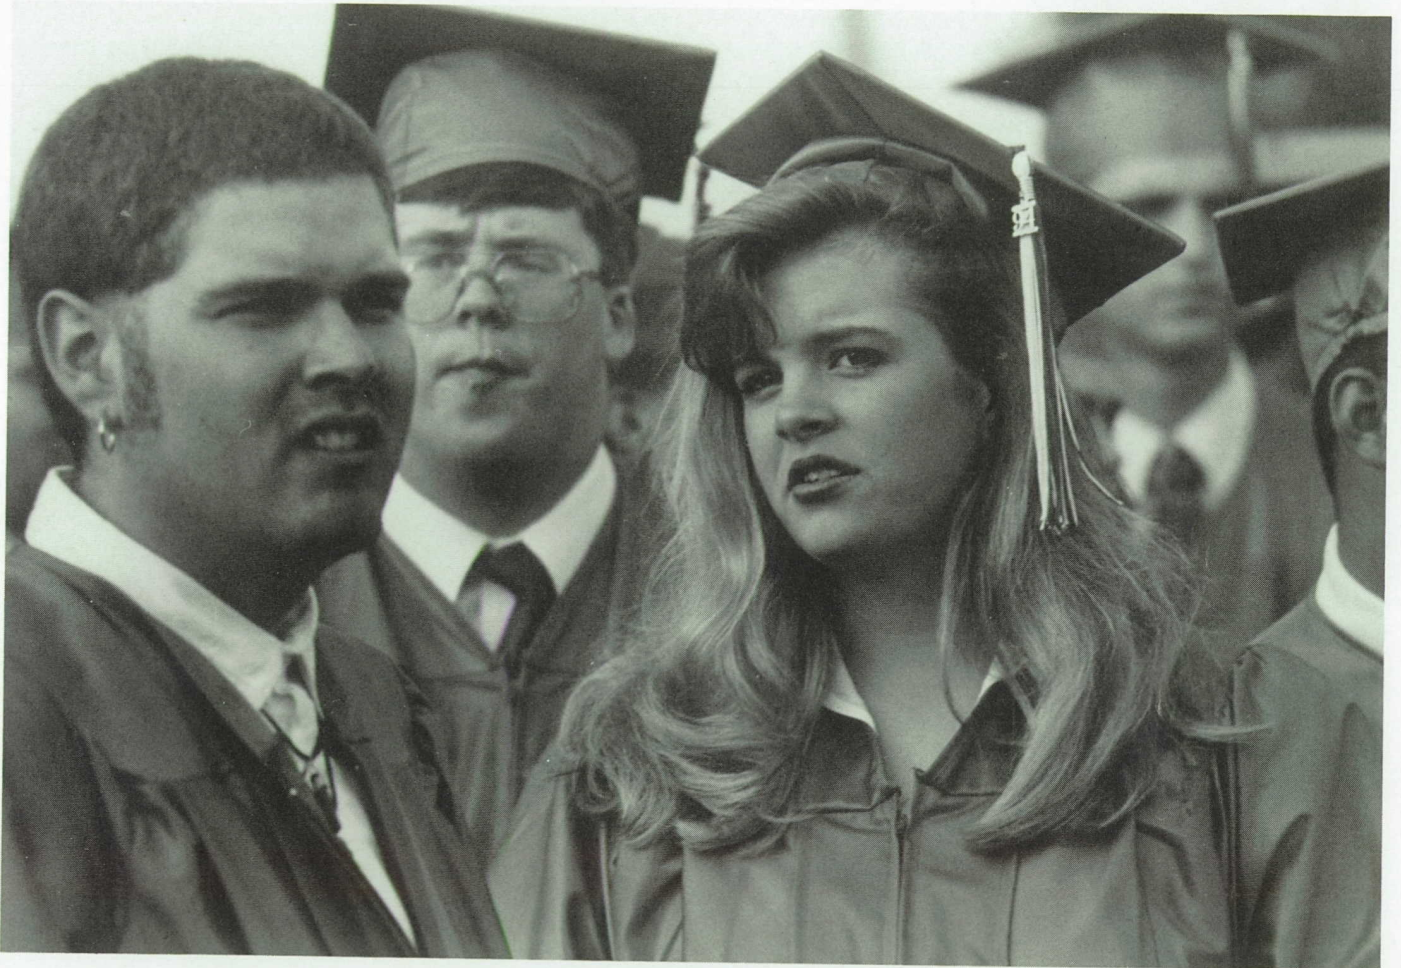

Spring not only brought school activities, it brought sunshine, flowers, and freedom...and graduation. by Anna Robinson and Emily Masterson.

A CLASSIC TALE

SO, DOES THIS MEAN WE'RE FISH AGAIN??? Imagining what their futures will bring, seniors Thomas Scholle, Richard Seemann, and Michelle Schooley wait in anticipation for commencement. A large majority of the graduates planned to attend college and attempt to survive another freshman year.

Josten's Publishing Company printed the 48th volume of the Aerie yearbook. Using the darkroom to produce all black and white pictures, staff photographers and photojournalism students took all pictures with the exception of class photos taken by George Gideon and Associates of Delmar Studios. Staff members designed all layouts and graphics, developed the theme with New Century Schoolbook and Zaph Chancery fonts and paste up pages, using Pagemaker 2 on Macintosh computers.
